Trudeau Patches Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today patched the holes in his cabinet created by the departure of James Richardson, bringing Andre Ouellet baek from the political wilderness and moving Barney Danson to defence.

At the same time he brought into the cabinet Joseph Guay, 61-year-old French MP from the Winnipeg suburb of St. Boniface. Richardson resigned from the defence portfolio last month to protest the government's language policy.

On Tuesday Pierre Juneau, former chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission and a defeated Liberal candidate in a byelection last year, was appointed chairman of the National Capital Commission.

Officials said he will receive a deputy minister-level salary as NCC chairman, probably about $50,000 a year. He was in the deputy minister's pay range in the adviser's job. Deputies are paid $40,000 to $60,000 a year.

The addition of Guay brings the cabinet to 32 persons, the largest since Confederation.

Ouellet, 37-year-old Quebec MP who has spent almost eight months in exile on the Liberal backbenches after being convicted of contempt of court in the so-called judges affair, will take over the urban affairs portfolio being vacated by Danson. It will be his third cabinet posting, following consumer affairs and postmaster gentral.

Danson, 55, takes over a portfolio he has sought since entering Parliament as MP for New York in 1968. He has been acting minister since Richardson resigned two weeks ago.

Guay, like Ouellet told only Tuesday night that he was going into the cabinet, will continue his responsibilities of government whip. Trudeau gave no indication of what other work he has in the cabinet.

FORD CONGRATULATES VICTOR

Carter Wins in a Squeaker, Democrats Control Congress

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — In one of the toughest presidential fights in U.S. history, Democrat Jimmy Carter swept out of the South to capture the White House early today.

Only three states were still undeclared — Maine, Oregon and Ohio. Ford led in Maine and Oregon and Ohio was a toss-up.

Both houses of Congress remained solidly Democratic.

His wife, Betty, read his congratulatory telegram to Carter.

"Dear Jimmy," the telegram said. "It is apparent now that you won a long and intense struggle for the presidency.

"I congratulate you on your victory. As one who has been honored to serve the people of this great land—both in Congress and as president—I believe that we must now put the divisions of the capaign behind us and unite the country once again . . ."

Carter claimed victory for himself and running-mate Walter Mondale during an emotional, early-morning appearance at an Atlanta convention centre before thousands of supporters.

"I'm not afraid to take on the responsibilities of president of the United States," he said, "because, my strength comes from you, the American people."

Carter paid tribute to Ford as the "toughest and most formidable opponent anybody could possibly have."

At one point, Carter's eyes filled with tears and he had to turn to his wife Rosalynn before he could continue speaking.

Carter at this point had a total of 272 electoral votes — two more than necessary to assure him of victory as the 39th president of the United States.

Ford held 231 electoral votes and was leading in Maine and Oregon, which could throw another 10 into his column.

There were another 25 at stake in Ohio. If Ford took them all, he would have 266 but he still would not have enough to win.

However, the Ford camp got a court order to impound New York state's voting machines, charging voting "irregularities" in the state. New York has 41 electoral votes, captured by Carter.

Trucks were dispatched to pick up all of the state's 25,000 voting machines.

The highly unusual action — believed to be a first in New York state — was ordered after representatives of Republic officials alleged that irregularities had occurred in Tuesday's election.

With 98 per cent of the state's vote counted, Carter led Ford by about 250,000 votes and was running four percentage points ahead — 52 to 48.

That lead was considered far more than could possibly be needed to survive any changes in the state's vote total as a result of a recount.

However, there was confusion over the status of absentee ballots in the state.

A Hesitant Mandate

By FRANK RUTTER
(An interpretive report from the Times Washington bureau chief)

WASHINGTON — Americans have taken a chance on change, voting in moderate numbers and by narrow margins in many states, to elect Jimmy Carter as their 39th president.

It was a hesitant mandate, outside the Georgia peanut merchant's native South, with many voters deciding only at the last moment to take that chance.

Incumbent President Gerald Ford had turned a runaway into a race, almost overtaking the enormous lead Carter took into the campaign three months ago, but falling a few thousand votes short in the big states of the industrial Northeast and Midwest.

There were, and still are, big doubts about Carter, and where he will take the country.

Those doubts showed in the excruciatingly close results in states like Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania and New York, even in Ford's home ground, Michigan.

The result may be that Carter will be a more cautious president than his campaign rhetoric indicated.

He has a fragile mandate, reflective of the unease, dissatisfaction, disillusionment, the doubts and fears of the country.

The closeness of the race brought out more voters than had been expected, although the turnout was no more than moderate and nowhere near the record that enthusiastic party workers were yelling about before the polls closed.

It was a campaign in which neither candidate impressed voters as inspirational. But they decided to take a gamble.

It comes down to a question of trying something new, was how California Governor Edmund Brown put it.

But if Carter tries anything too new, he might find he is not so popular.

He isn't anyway, having been elected by about one-quarter of the total voting-age population.

He has promised one major new social program — national health insurance. But he hedged his promise by say-

Two-Week Refit Job Lost In Yarrows Wage Dispute

The U.S. container ship Sealand McLean, which was to have docked at Yarrows shipyard today for a two-week refit, has been diverted because of unsettled labor conditions at Yarrows and Burrard shipyard in North Vancouver.

Yarrows general manager Don Challinor said between 200 and 250 men would have been employed on the Sealand McLean project.

The owners of the ship's line decided to divert the Sealand McLean on being informed by Yarrows of a strike vote to take place on Monday in both yards.

Of the 24 unions belonging to the Joint Shipyard Conference, 18 have rejected the Burrard-Yarrows' latest contract offer while six voted in favor.

"They changed all their plans and stayed on the run," Challinor said. "They're looking around and trying to decide what they're going to do."

Conference president Jim McAvoy was out of town today and could not be reached for comment on the loss of the Sealand McLean job. Yarrows has a contract involving work on several of the Sealand line vessels.

Walt Frederikson, business agent for the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers, however, said he does not believe it would mean the loss of Sealand business to the Victoria shipyard.

"I understand they (the ship) are going to make another trip until they see what happens on this vote business," he said. "They have much the same problems in the United States."

GOV'T TO FILL NORTHLAND VOID

The B.C. government has stepped in at the last minute to provide passenger and mail service to north coastal communities left isolated by the shutdown of Northland Navigation.

Transport Minister Jack Davis said today the provincial and federal governments have come up with a 50-50 cost-sharing arrangement which should provide adequate service.

The service will cost B.C. and the federal government about $400,000 a year each, but B.C. will keep passenger fares collected on the run. The fare structure has not been set yet but Davis said it was possible that about $200,000 a year could be collected.

Under the agreement, the B.C. Ferries Queen of Prince Rupert will stop at Ocean Falls twice a week on its trips between Kelsey Bay and Prince Rupert.

In addition, the B.C. Steamship Company has leased a high-speed 80-foot motor launch—the Lumba Lumba—from Rivtow Straits which will provide passenger and mail service to the smaller communities previously served by Northland.

Smith Goes Home

GENEVA (UPI) — Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith quit the Geneva conference on black majority rule for Rhodesia today saying he relies on the United States to prevent "Communist aggression" in southern Africa.

After an informal meeting with the four black nationalist leaders at the conference and British chairman Ivor Richard, Smith said no progress had been made since talks began Oct. 28 and he was "tired of twiddling my thumbs."

Rhodesian officials said they doubt Smith would return to the Geneva conference table.

Asked if he thought Jimmy Carter's election to the U.S. presidency would have any effect on the conference, Smith said:

"No, I don't believe the results of the American election will have any effect on this at all. My belief is that the new administration will be happy to see the work which has already started continue.

"I believe they are dedicated to try to bring peace to southern Africa and avoid Communist aggression in that part of the world."

Smith again insisted he is sticking to U.S. proposals for Rhodesia drawn up in September by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger which call for a peaceful change to black majority rule within two years.

"We've made no progress," Smith said, appearing tired and irritable. "When I'm satisfied there's something to come back to, I'll come back."

Meanwhile, Rhodesia announced today the completion of a three-day, anti-guerrilla drive into neighboring Mozambique in an operation that destroyed more than 50 tons of weapons.

$10,000 Fraud Fine

WINNIPEG (CP) — Provincial Judge Robert Trudel Tuesday fined a Winnipeg man a total of $10,000 in connection with the rolling back of automobile odometers.

Bruno Jack Daudrich, 29, pleaded guilty to 46 counts of fraud. Court was told he participated in a ring that purchased cars in Quebec and rolled back the odometers before re-selling them in Manitoba.

He was one of 24 persons arrested in Winnipeg last July after a nation-wide RCMP investigation of rollbacks of used-car odometers.

Three of the others arrested pleaded guilty to one count each of fraud and were each given six-month conditional discharges.

A fourth pleaded guilty to two counts of fraud and was given a two-year suspended sentence.

The cases against the other 19 persons are still pending.

Quebec Italians Threaten Boycott of Grits

MONTREAL (CP) — The Italian-Canadian Education Council said Tuesday night it will begin organizing a boycott this weekend against Liberal candidates in the Nov. 15 Quebec election unless Premier Robert Bourassa's government comes up with "solutions, not promises", on the explosive language issue.

Council President Angelo Montini said in an interview he is certain that not only Italians, but Greeks, Portuguese and other minorities whose children are affected by the Official Language Act will support the boycott.

Immigant voters are significant in a dozen central and north-end Montreal ridings, including Bourassa's riding of Mercier, which he won by a margin of less than 3,000 votes in 1973. About 6,500 of the 36,000 voters in Mercier are new Canadians.

The council hasn't recommended an alternative to the Liberals but the vote conceivably could shift to the Union Nationale, which has promised to bring back freedom of choice in the language of education.

The Union Nationale appeared at mid-campaign to be gaining strength in western Montreal ridings where English-speaking residents also are at odds with the language law passed by the Bourassa government in 1974.

At dissolution Oct. 18, Liberals held 96 seats in the Quebec national assembly, the Parti Quebecois six, the Union Nationale one, Creditistes one, Parti National Populaire two and independents two. Two seats were vacant.

At a news conference Tuesday following the Italian-Canadian Council's initial boycott threat, Education Minister Jean Bienvenue said he would urge a new Liberal government to end formal testing of immigrant children for proficiency in English.

The children now must pass tests to get into an English-language school. Bienvenue said "sufficient knowledge of English" would remain a condition of entry but interviews rather than tests might be used to determine knowledge.

Children who already had brothers and sisters in English-language schools would not have to take the tests, Bienvenue said. Furthermore, French-language schools would have to introduce English courses in grade three in future.

"We want a clear position on the language issue," Montini said. "I would be satisfied if Bourassa decided to send all immigrants to French schools, without any exception."

A Hesitant Mandate

ing during the campaign that the scheme, which he has not yet spelled out in detail, might have to be phased in according to government revenues.

Similarly, he promised tax reform, but only after he takes a year to study how to accomplish it.

Carter also campaigned hard on unemployment, saying that his administration would give top priority to the problem. However, again, he has been vague about how he would create more jobs, talking generally of a mix of government and private enterprise action.

There was clear indecision about whom to trust the most, a factor mainly responsible for Ford's strong finish.

An important reflection of desire for a change was the turn-over of incumbents in the Senate and in contests for governor.

No less than 13 Senate seats changed hands, although the end result made virtually no difference to the party balance in the Senate, because the Democrats and Republicans swapped gains.

The closeness of the presidential race followed this pattern, but Ford lost most of the close ones.

Two other factors were influential.

One was the heavy turnout of trade union members which gave Carter a big edge in most of the large cities, enough for him to offset Ford's strength in rural and suburban areas.

The other factor was the release, four days before the vote, of the latest economic indicators, most of them bad, which reminded voters of an issue which the candidates themselves had failed to articulate effectively. But the bad news clearly hurt Ford.

Carter swept the South like a scythe, reaping the bulk of his lead in the popular vote there.

He has been fond of saying he would be the first southerner in the White House since 1848, although many people consider that Lyndon Johnson of Texas was from the South.

Ford's constituency was the West, part of the Midwest and Northeast. He dented the southern majority only in Virginia, which he won by a few thousand votes.

As expected, Carter got almost all the black votes—as much as 90 per cent of it—and did best in the blue collar and lower income areas. This is where the economic impact has been greatest.

Carter also picked up a majority of the Jewish and Spanish American votes, and halved independents with Ford. He also did better than he had hoped among Catholics.

Except for the gratuitous remarks in his interview with Playboy magazine, Carter soft-pedalled his religion. Instead he devoted more emphasis to his family, whose members proved to be effective campaigners in his behalf.

Ford, his voice almost gone, exhausted by his energetic campaign during the final ten days, obstinately clung to the hope that he could still pull it off, dousing his larynx with tea and honey as he watched the election slip away in the morning.

Faces were long, however, at the Sheraton Park Hotel where the Republicans had gathered for a victory party.

By two o'clock, it had all become a blur. States like Illinois, Ohio, New York and California were still counting ballots. Recounts were likely in these and some other states.

CBC-TV Outlet Approved for Victoria

Victoria will have a CBC television station, possibly as soon as September, 1978, following Ottawa's approval to establish an outlet here.

CHEK-TV, which has been affiliated with both the CTV and the CBC will now apply for disaffiliation with CBC and become soley connected with CTV, station manager Frank Bond said today.

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) gave the approval Tuesday and also gave permission for CBC to set up 12 TV rebroadcasting stations on northern Vancouver Island.

The Victoria station will improve reception to the area and the decisions will facilitate the extension of both CBC and CTV network services throughout Vancouver Island, the CRTC said in a prepared statement.

Fred Engel, production manager for CBC Vancouver, said the company was both "pleased and ready to go" with the Victoria studio.

Engel said plans for the station have all been prepared and approved and now it is just a matter of implementing them.

CBC owns land on Blanshard Street behind the Victoria Press building. The CBC said earlier that the cost of starting the station would be about $7 million.

Bond said CHEK has been anticipating for some time that CBC would have its own station in Victoria.

CHEK will apply for CTV affiliation, but it will be a good deal different from the Vancouver station, Bond said. "We will do our best to be the best—Vancouver Island station."

News and public affairs programs will all be geared for Vancouver Island viewers, he said.

The arrival of CBC will bring more competition for CHEK, Bond said, "but we welcome the challenge."

The rebroadcasting stations are to be located in Port McNeill, Nimpkish, Holberg, Port Alice, Coal Harbour, Port Hardy, Alert Bay, Tofino, Wokas Lake, Gold River, Woss and Tahsis. Television will be available to about 98 per cent of the Island's population.

In its beginning stages, the Victoria CBC station is expected to have little in the way of local content.

During the application hearing last March, the CBC said there would be 7½ hours a week of local programming during the beginning stages of operation.

UNION EXECUTIVE TO STAY

The union representing 200 inside workers at Victoria city hall decided Tuesday to bypass personnel director Terry Fitzpatrick in its future dealings with management.

At the same time, backing from his fellow union members led Rick Doyle to withdraw his resignation as a vice-president of the Canadian Union of Public employees local. Both developments came at a union executive meeting.

Doyle quit his union post last Friday, citing "utter frustration" in dealing with Fitzpatrick on contract grievances. In one instance it took two years to settle a question, he said today.

But a petition circulated among city hall staff urged him to change his mind and he did at the Tuesday meeting.

The union contract provides for dealing with either the personnel director or city manager Jim Bramley. Doyle said, and the union executive has decided to deal with Bramley.

Doyle said Fitzpatrick threatened him with legal action after he explained why he was quitting Friday but Fitzpatrick denied that today.

The personnel director did say he had suggested Doyle see a lawyer but he added that he has been tied up with arbitration hearings and has not had time to consider the situation.

Kissinger Out Under Carter

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — U.S. State Secretary Henry Kissinger has said he could live with a Carter foreign policy, but he will not be given the chance.

Jimmy Carter has said Kissinger should go and has criticized what he called Kissinger's secret diplomatic undertakings.

In his administration, Carter told crowds in his successful campaign for the presidency, there would be no adherence to the Arab boycott of U.S. companies doing business with Israel or a state secretary shuttling around the world with U.S. foreign policy in his briefcase.

Carter has not said whom he might choose as Kissinger's replacement, but it is unlikely he will pick someone with past close government ties — he has argued that Washington needs new ideas and approaches.

A strong contender for the position is Zbigniew Brzezinski, who has only a brief link with Washington. He was a member of the state department's policy-planning staff in the mid-1960s.

Brzezinski, born in Poland, was taken to Montreal at the age of 10 when his father was sent there as Polish consul-general in 1938.

He was educated at Roman Catholic schools there and graduated from McGill University. In 1953 he moved to the U.S. and became a U.S. citizen.

Trudeau Patches Holes in Cabinet than a month after the prime minister did major surgery on his cabinet in hopes of making it more acceptable when public opinion surveys showed the government's popularity was low.

The shuffle was made necessary by the resignation of Richardson, concerned that the government might enshrine French language rights in the constitution and give Quebec veto power over constitutional changes.

Richardson's position in the cabinet seemed assured because of the low western representation in the Liberal caucus. Now the prime minister has reached for a man who has little fame in Parliament, except for baiting the opposition in the Commons, to maintain that western representation. Guay has represented St. Boniface since 1968.

Trudeau also took the first opportunity to do what he said he would do, bring back Ouellet, MP for Montreal Papineau since 1967, after Ouellet's problems with the courts were ended.

Juneau, a special policy adviser to Prime Minister Trudeau since his defeat in the Hochelaga riding in a September, 1975, byelection, replaces Edgar Gallant who recently retired.

The 54-year-old Juneau takes over as head of a government agency charged with the development of the National Capital Commission.

Juneau has held a succession of senior government jobs and served in the Trudeau cabinet for two months. He resigned after failing to win a seat in the House of Commons.

Newcomers To Canada Show Dip

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration to Canada dropped by 22.3 per cent to 73,735 persons for the first six months of 1976 compared with the same period last year, immigration department statistics show.

Immigration Minister Bud Cullen Tuesday attributed the decline to immigration regulation changes made in 1974 to tie immigration more closely to the needs of the Canadian labor market.

Cullen said in a prepared statement that more than 50 per cent of the independent workers coming to Canada during the first six months of this year "had pre-arranged employment in positions for which no Canadians were available."

the weather

A strong southerly circulation ahead of a slow-moving Pacific disturbance continued to lash the north coast with rain and gales overnight. Meanwhile, a high-pressure ridge hanging on in the southern interior kept skies mainly clear in that part of the province. The Pacific front is expected to move eastward across the coast later today and will take showers to all regions on Thursday. Another disturbance is expected to reach the north B.C. coast late Thursday.

Ford Workers Out

TORONTO (CP) — About 14,000 hourly-paid workers at Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. plants across Canada were off their jobs today as strike deadline of 10 a.m. EST passed without a settlement being reached. Tony Fredo, public relations officer for Ford, said negotiations with the United Auto Workers union will continue but no immediate settlement is expected.

Not Guilty—Paish

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Businessman Howard Paish has pleaded not guilty to two charges of cruelty to animals that were laid after a conservation officer's investigation of Paish's hunting operations in the Spatsizi area in August 1975. The Spatsizi is about 500 miles northwest of this community where the trial is being held.

Earnings: $230.49

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly earnings for about half the labor force rose by four-tenths of one per cent in August to $230.49, Statistics Canada reported Tuesday. Increases in weekly earnings were recorded in all industries except forestry, construction, trade and service.

Trains Crash

WARSAW (Reuter) — At least 25 people were killed and 60 injured early today when an express train ran into the rear of a stationary passenger train in fog in central Poland, the news agency PAP reported.

Theft Ring 'Broken'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Tuesday that a highly-organized shoplifting ring suspected of stealing $50,000 worth of women's clothing in B.C. and Alberta during the past month has been broken. Police staged a series of raids Tuesday in Vancouver's West End, seizing a large quantity of goods and arresting a 36-year-old man and three women aged 30, 27 and 19. No charges had yet been laid and names were not released.

Riots Protest Justice System

OTTAWA (CP) — The commissioner of penitentiaries said Tuesday that rioting and hostage-taking prisoners are protesting the entire prison and criminal justice system, not just conditions behind bars.

Andre Therrien said this new attitude has appeared in the last six months in such places as British Columbia penitentiary and St. Vincent de Paul in Quebec.

He added that there is little he can do to overcome such protests — that his job simply is administrator of a prison system that society demands.

He said he hopes the majority of prisoners will be reasonable and not press demands that the penitentiary system cannot answer.

Therrien was testifying before the first working meeting of the Commons subcommittee on penitentiaries which will investigate all aspects of the system and travel the country talking with guards and prisoners.

He later expanded on some of his remarks to reporters.

The commissioner sai dthat while it is important the penitentiary service have new institutions to replace the old walled fortresses where riots and unrest have been occuring frequently, his most important priority must be his "people problem."

He must re-establish communication with penitentiary staff which has suffered from large growth, turnover and change in the system in the last 15 years.

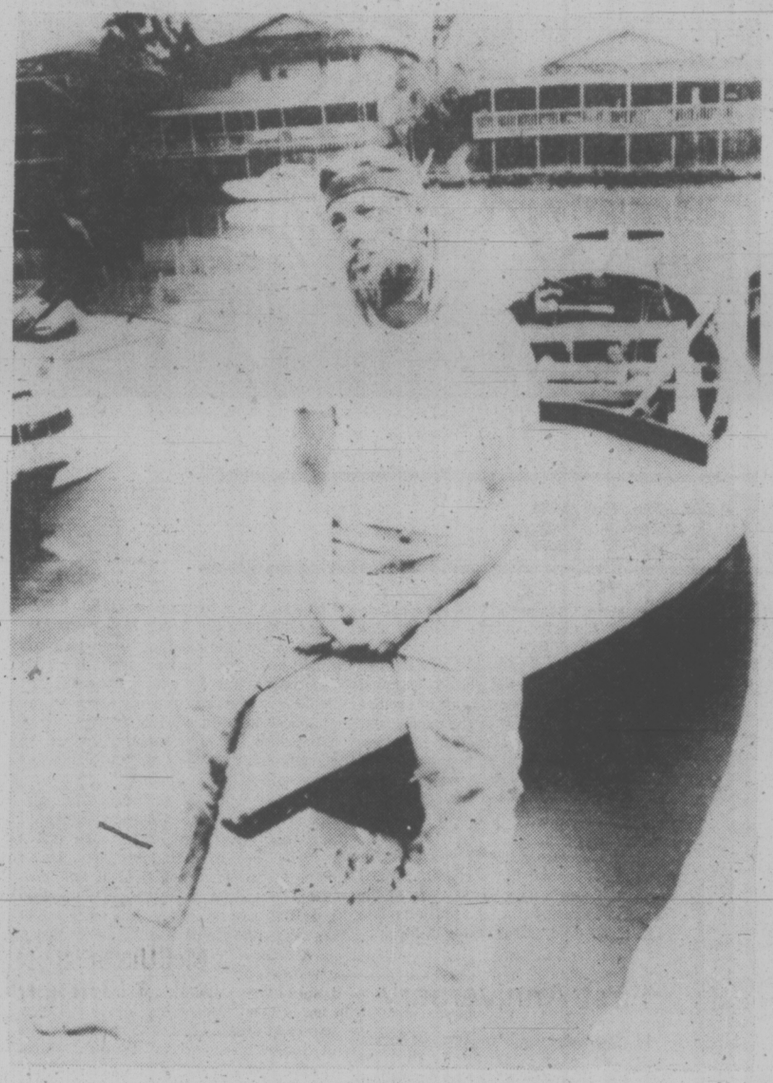
As the committee prepared to go full steam ahead in an investigation that will extend well into next year, the commissioner raised these points:

—In future, maximum security prisoners will be segregated into groups of 12 to 18 for better control.

—The service is looking forward to having special holding units, super-maximum parts of penitentiaries where dangerous prisoners could live apart from others working and playing there.

—Other special areas will be created for sexual offenders, stool pigeons and others who require protection from harm caused by other prisoners. Finding a way to do this was a problem.

—There is a need for creation of employment in prisons because there is too much idle time. If this is not found, problems will continue.



Quesnel in Honolulu talks about his feat

Rower Reaches Hawaii

HONOLULU (AP) — Patrick Quesnel, a 27-year-old adventurer from Washington state who did it because he believes in himself, stroked into the small dock at a suburban marina near here Tuesday, apparently the first man ever to row a boat from the West Coast to Hawaii.

It took Quesnel, a commercial fisherman from Vaughn, Wash., 111 days of solitude to make the 2,200-mile crossing in his 22-foot Grand Banks dory.

"Basically, I'm a doer instead of a leader," said the husky, beareded Quesnel in telling why he decided seven years ago he would make the voyage.

After leaving La Push, Wash., July 14, Quesnel said he went south along the coast until he picked up the trade winds off Baja California.

"Once it got into the trades off Baja," he said, "it was downhill all the way."

The worst of it was in the colder waters off Washhington and Oregon, he said.

"It was so cold off Oregon's coast that I had to put cardboard in my mouth to keep my teeth from chattering. Once they chattered for 16 hours," Quesnel said.

"I always felt I would make it except one time when I was off Cape Blanco (Oregon) one night when I was hit by three big waves," Quesnel said. "I thought the reaper was going to get me."

Quesnel said he had used up his normal food supply and was into emergency rations, but had plenty of water left by the time he reached shore.

FERRY RULING APPEALED BY AMPUTEE

David Jefferson, a double amputee who was refused a job with British Columbia Ferries, will take his case to B.C. Supreme Court.

Jefferson, 33, missing one hand and one foot, was refused a job as an engineer on the ferries and an independent board of inquiry, set up at the request of the B.C. Human Rights Branch, ruled several weeks ago that the ferry authority did not discriminate against Jefferson in refusing to hire him.

A government spokesman said the case will be the first appeal of its kind in B.C. Supreme Court and legal costs will be picked up by the human rights branch.

Concorde Line To Close Down

LONDON (AP) — Britain and France said Tuesday they will not build any more of the costly supersonic Concorde jetliners beyond the 16 planes scheduled.

The announcement was issued after talks between French Transport Minister Marcel Cavaille and British Industry Minister Gerald Kaufman.

Kaufman told a news conference the two countries also will abandon a paper study on development of a post-Concorde advanced supersonic transport.

Kaufman said further cooperation between the two countries in development of subsonic airliners such as the European airbus should have priority over planes faster than the speed of sound.

Nine have been built and sold so far — five to British Airways and four to Air France. Three of the remaining nine are destined for British Airways and two for Air France. Preliminary purchase agreements have been signed with Iran for two others.

Britain and France have accepted that the $1.92 billion spent on the research, design and development of Concorde will not be recovered directly through sales of production planes. Each Concorde with support facilities costs about $49.6 million.

Supersonic commercial travel was inaugurated last January, with London-Bahrein flights by British Airways and Paris-Rio de Janeiro flights by Air France.

A Promising Report

Not the least of the ironies in that provincial government housing report released Tuesday, which calls for a strong centralized (socialist?) control of housing planning, is that several of the men who wrote it were campaigning for election to the provincial legislature exactly a year ago for more "local control" and greater responsibilities to municipal government.

But such are the realities of the housing situation in B.C. that no one's going to blame them for changing their minds and giving municipalities and regional districts several sharp blasts for doing little actually to help provide housing, and doing a lot to delay the construction of needed housing.

An example. Vancouver, the richest, most populous municipality in the province established a housing corporation several years ago. It has a fair amount of undeveloped land, owned by the city. It certainly has a tremendous need for affordable housing. But how many housing units has the corporation built to date? Zero.

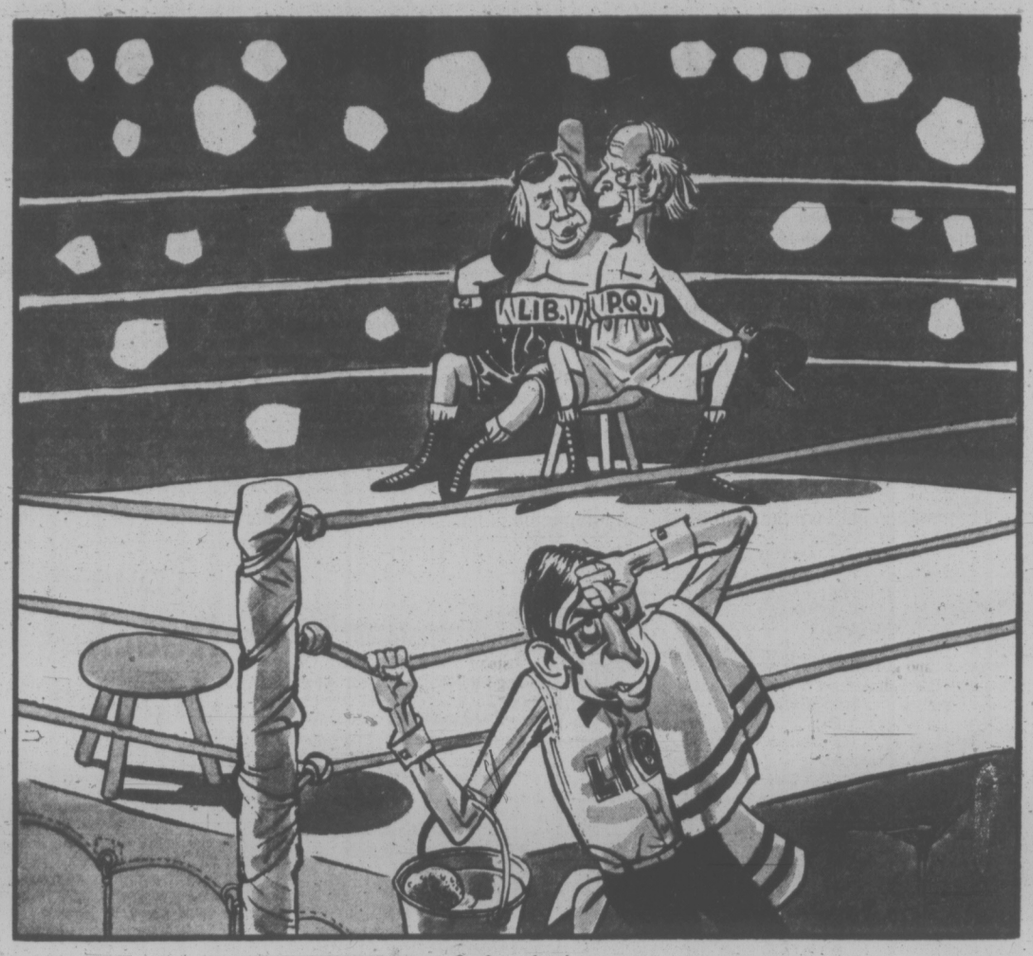
And examples of the red tape jungle that Housing and Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis talks of are not hard to find either. One Vancouver builder of a quality townhouse project in the Champlain Heights area of the city was subjected to a continual revision process. City officials would not allow garbage cans to be located outside, at the rear of the units, as in most single-family homes everywhere. Instead, he had to redesign the poured concrete foundation wall at the back to accomodate a garbage "closet" complete with steel door.

A small matter perhaps, but it forced up the cost of the finished unit perhaps several hundred dollars, plus the delay meant more carrying charges on the developer's financing, which were passed through to you know who.

The municipalities which have encouraged housing construction, are difficult to find. Locally, every public hearing on a new housing proposal meets with outraged cries from residents who got there first and want no more newcomers to louse up the view across the street.

For every Prince George, which for two decades has marketed its own building lots at a steady rate to keep the price down to affordable levels (meaning a house can be built for the full price of $40,000), there are 25 municipalities whose councils probably sympathize with Mayor Ed Mckita's opinions about low-cost housing in survey but lack a similar colorful way of expressing themselves.

Municipal leaders are sure to grouse about the directions and policy changes contained in this tough housing report, but at least the committee of MLAs, provincial civil servants and staff from the Union of B.C. Municipalities who wrote it were demonstrating some leadership. The municipal politician has forfeited the right to complain about this report by failing to exercise the same quality.



Quebec election.

Some Good Gestures

Gestures maybe. But the Bennett administration is at least showing the flag in two cases of public interest and deserves commendation for its actions. If the Canadian Transport Commission allows CP Rail to abandon the Esquimalt and Nanaimo rail line north of Parksville the government is prepared to go to court to reclaim the right of way. Better still, the government should consider suing Canadian Pacific for breach of contract.

The other case involves B.C. Telephone's relations with its wholly-owned subsidiaries. Counsel for the provincial government told the Canadian Radio, Television and Communications Commission that it must be more thorough than the Canadian Transport Commission was in looking at the link between B.C. Tel and its equipment suppliers, Automatic Electric and Lenkurt Electric. While the government stops short of suggesting any abuse in the links, it serves notice to the company that it is watching closely. Any British Columbian forced to depend on the system might use stronger language than the government.

Perhaps it is a government of millionaires or used car dealers, to use some of the more uncomplimentary terms applied to this administration. But few people can fault the government's interest in these two cases. It is to be hoped this administration will pursue both cases with the same obsessive energy it reserves for a balanced budget.

ROB BULL

Phoney War in Quebec?

MONTREAL — With less than two weeks remaining before Quebec goes to the polls Nov. 15, there is still a feeling that the campaign to date has been a "phoney war."

Party leaders have been trying to see as many ridings in the province as possible in the four-week campaign while keeping a close eye on their own and running interference with the temperamental early winter weather.

In most parts of the province, election posters have been slow to appear and all the parties were still scrounging around for candidates until nearly the closing date of Nov. 1.

Some things are already obvious, however, and perhaps the most significant is the reluctance of many people here to date to take seriously the message of Premier Robert Bourassa's Liberals that the current campaign is another referendum on whether or not Quebec will remain within Canada.

It is difficult for the average Quebecois to see how the Liberals will lose 40 ridings in the 110-seat house, which would place it in a minority situation. Where people think about it at all, there appears to be a feeling that Bourassa and the province could benefit from a stronger opposition in the national assembly.

Little Things

So in the ridings, the talk instead is about local issues like the impact of the province's Official Language Act (in areas with a strong English-speaking or new Canadian population), or the brutal financial cost to farmers of the federal government's dairy policy in ridings where agriculture (like Assomption east of Montreal where Roland Comtois, a former federal Liberal MP, is running against Parti Quebecois economist Jacques Parizeau) is still significant, the lack of adequate government services for the new and growing populations in the subdivisions around the province's major cities and the terrible state of roads in more remote areas.

When Bourassa arrives in a place he tends to keep talking about the constitution, attacking the Parti Quebecois and suggesting that labor needs to be controlled, but the people want to know what the Liberals have been doing for them lately.

The premier has been booed and jostled because of these local issues and the fabled big "rouge" machine seems to be having trouble meshing its gears.

Liberal problems range from little things, like greeting Bourassa with the party campaign song growling out at 33 1-3 rpm instead of a peppy 45 when he turned up at Windsor in the eastern townships, and then having him arrive at a shopping centre near Sherbrooke later in the day half an hour after all the stores closed, to forgetting to arrange press transportation when he gave one of the best speeches of the campaign at Mont Joli down on the Gaspe Peninsula.

The Liberals are wrangling publicly about such basic party policies as language, for example, with candidates like Bryce Mackasey, Jean Marchand and Immigration Minister Lise Bacon saying quite firmly that Bourassa has agreed to change Bill 22 while others like Cultural Affairs Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier and Communications Minister Denis Hardy say that nothing of the sort can be contemplated. Ken Fraser of Huntingdon told newsmen the only reason he voted for the bill was because the party threatened to cut off public works projects in his riding if he did not.

But other parties are having their problems too.

The Pequistes, for example, seem to be at odds about what would happen if, two years after they formed a government, they held a referendum on independence which was defeated. Some candidates appear to think the party would remain as the government of a province within Canada while others would see it as a vote of non-confidence.

The Parti Quebecois has found many leaders of Quebec society to swell its ranks. One of these new converts, Jean-Guy Cardinal, a former Union Nationale

BRYCE MACKASEY
. . . one who jumped ship

One of the surprises of the campaign has been the sudden upsurge of the old Union Nationale, a party which was wiped off the map in the 1973 election and held only a single seat (as the result of a byelection) when the legislature was dissolved last month. Now the UN looks like a spoiler in some ridings and appears certain to pick up some new seats.

However, Rodrigue Biron, the party's young, bearded leader has been having his problems too, in part because the party's program does not say the same thing in English as it does in French and also because the organization has still not wholly recovered from its 1973 shock.

None of the three federal Liberal MPs who resigned their seats to run in the current campaign, Marchand, Mackasey or Comtois have easy fights ahead of them.

There is a certain resentment among some provincial Liberals still smarting from Prime Minister Trudeau's insulting remarks about Premier Bourassa last spring, while the Parti Quebecois and the Union Nationale have been making comments about the three rats leaving a shipwrecked federal ship.

Nevertheless, many federal Liberals see the defeat of Bourassa and his friends at the polls or even a significant decline in provincial Liberal strength as seriously hampering the ability of Trudeau to govern.

As a result some federal Liberal MPs are campaigning side by side with their provincial counterparts and federal Quebec Liberal caucus leader Marc Lalonde has been lending an active hand.

But at least one federal Liberal MP has been telling his constituents not to accept the old Liberal argument that the only choice for a Canadian citizen is the Liberal party.

On the other side of the federal fence, while the three federal Tory MPs from Quebec seem to be taking a passive role this time, many ordinary party members are enthusiastically campaigning for the Union Nationale, lending their organizational skills and helping to find money.

Pity Poor Quebec!

The election campaign also shows signs of turning dirty. The PQ keeps talking about a general odor of corruption that surrounds the Liberal government, backing it up with snippets from the various provincial inquiry reports published in the last two years. Bourassa has started to retaliate with charges of influence peddling by at least one PQ candidate, Parizeau.

Many of the more paranoid observers of the provincial scene see in Bourassa's statements that only the Liberals are able to control violence in Quebec the threat for a repeat of the notorious "coup de la Brinks" of 1970 when it was graphically suggested that money would leave the province if either the Union Nationale or the Parti Quebecois took power.

If the whole campaign seems to be leaving Quebeckers with a difficult choice, perhaps the bi-monthly newsletter of the Pilgrims of St. Michael, otherwise known as the white berets, a right-wing fringe Roman Catholic group which has in the past supported the Creditistes, contains a needed word of advice.

The newsletter, Towards Tomorrow, Pilgram asks: "Who should we vote for on Nov. 15?"

"We will ask for the light of Heaven and we will do our best, knowing well that a vote at election time is a very weak tool in the hands of the people. God alone can give to princes the power and virture to accomplish their duty to make their people happy."

"Let us ask God to have pity on our poor Quebec! Let us pray in our homes. The Nov. 15 elections could show miracles if men asked God for them."

Trudeau's Apology

Prime Minister Trudeau's apology to the Japanese government for the evacuation and internment of Canadian citizens of Japanese orgin makes very little sense. Many people have been angered — especially those Canadians who suffered as prisoners of war in Hong Kong, Burma, etc. — and their anger is to be expected. Trudeau was most unkind.

As a Canadian of Japanese origin and as one who was personally affected by the evacuation, I cannot understand why Canada should apologize to Japan for a wholly domestic matter affecting Canadian citizens. Internal matters are Canada's concern only, and does or should anyone else care?

Also, to those who still justify the evacuation on an "eye for an eye" basis, I say this:

Is it fair to hang the rap on Canadian citizens of Japanese origin? We had nothing to do with Japan's brutal treatment of Canadian POWs. We were here in Canada. Should other Canadians of various origins be subjected to similar treatment? The "eye-for-eye" syndrome, then, makes as little sense as Trudeau's apology.

Incidently, the evacuation climaxed years of anti-Japanese hostility in British Columbia. The Japanese aggression, including Pearl Harbor, provided the much needed justification to escalate that hostility on a national basis. Politically rewarding rheoteric such as "national security" became the popular theme and the mission was accomplished! The "need to protect Japanese-Canadians from physical harm" was another reason for the evacuation and internment. If the safety of Japanese-Canadians was important, why were many families relocated to the vicinity of a Manitoba town that sent many of their young sons to Hong Kong where they were taken prisoners? The "national security" argument is indeed frail, considering that the German and Italian population in Canada were not interned. Or were 23,000 men, women and children a threat because they were distinguishable by color of skin and color of hair? There can be no other reason, other than anti-Japanese hostility, for the evacuation.

Certain sectors of the media (and others) have suggested that Canadians should try and forget the blemishes of our past history. To the contrary, history is our experience and the foundation upon which a nation builds. Whether that history is good or bad is irrelevant. What matters is the lesson to be learned and Canada must never again allow the actions of a foreign government to influence the treatment of Canadian citizens in Canada. —A Nisei Answers.

Grand Play

With over 50 years of residency and working with various groups of people in Quebec, and a stint in municipal politics (I am bilingual) I never used race, religion, color, sex or language in hiring or promoting people, but selected the most qualified person I could find for the position.

I am sure that in any free enterprise system or "just society," 95 per cent of persons entrusted with such responsibility would follow this practice.

Not so today in our federal or Quebec provincial governments and many Quebec corporations. The most important prerequisite is you must speak French. I have both French and English-speaking relatives and we discuss this turn of events.

In one major utility, publicly-owned and headquartered in Quebec, English-speaking supervisors who cannot master the French language have been told to seek transfers out of the province.

The daily use of the word bilingualism itself is phoney. It's not a case of what's good for the country as a whole but what's good for Quebec. It's simply a grand play on how to retain power. This ties in with the current trend to repatriate our constitution, which is to enable our PM and his Quebec cohorts to put a padlock on the coffin containing the rights of the English-speaking majority in this country and throw away the key.

At this stage I would agree that Quebec is different and makes it all too clear that what's good enough for the rest of Canada is not good enough for her. Besides, she has enough federally-elected representatives to have her way without regard for the rest of us, so why don't we let her go her own way now before it's too late for us to survive as an English-speaking country?

Finally, before some of you rush for pen and paper and start screaming racist or bigot, I would suggest you look at the facts and wake up before it's too damn late — R. S. Penfold, 220-425 Simcoe Street.

First Anniversary

In a few short weeks the present Socred government will celebrate its first anniversary of power. At the recent Socred convention Premier Bennett and Grace McCarthy were most optimistic about the future of our wonderful province. The premier thought that in the next two or three years our economy would really get rolling. Grace McCarthy forecast that tourism would hold first place in our economy by the year 2000. So much for the bright future ahead of us. Let us look back at the present year.

We had a cold, wet summer in B.C. this year and this undoubtedly affected the tourist industry. The doubling of the ferry fares hurt Vancouver Island tourism. Ask the motel owners on Douglas Street and Highway 1A in Victoria. The government made money on the ferries and many others lost.

The cutbacks and layoffs in the hospitals, the ferry service and many fine organizations helping the handicapped certainly hurt a lot of people directly and indirectly and helped to make this the worst year of unemployment for many years. The people most affected are to a large extent the lower paid workers and people who really need help.

The orchardists in the Okanagan Valley have had a bad year. I heard an official of the B.C. Fruit Growers state that the growers were barely making expenses. The government was asked for financial aid but there were no funds available.

The 40 per cent increase in the sales tax, the huge increase in car insurance, the increase in hospital rates and the 10 per cent increase in rents has made this a tough year for the people in the lower income brackets and those on fixed incomes. I certainly hope that it is not going to continue like this for the next three years.

I am wondering what is going to be the policy of the government and the new land commission with regard to farm land. If they follow the example of the governments of the 1950s and the 1960s tens of thousands of acres of prime farm land will disappear as did the farm lands in Lulu Island, the Fraser Valley, Okanagan Valley and other places. This should not be allowed to happen again. It will be hard to stop as the subdivision of land is one of the most lucrative of businesses.

I think that those who would destroy our farm land could be aptly described by Oscar Wilde's epigram: "They know the price of everything and the value of nothing." — G. R. Hunter, Summerland, B.C.

Assessment Act

In regard to the Assessment Act brought in by the NDP government in 1974, I would like to comment on two of its most objectionable aspects, insofar as property owners are concerned.

Section 24 (2) of the Act states that in determining the "actual value" of land and improvements the assessor may consider, among other things, ". . . the price that the land and improvements might be reasonably expected to bring if offered for sale in the open market . . ."

This means that if the provincial government decides to enforce the legislation which is already on the statute books, you could be asked to pay higher property taxes on any outstanding view which you might have from your property. If I lived in West Vancouver or North Vancouver, I could have to pay property taxes on the beautiful night-time view of the city of Vancouver. If I had a beautiful view of the mountains, forests or sea, I could likewise be penalized.

Market value of any property, particularly if it is to be used for residential purposes, is affected by the view which may be seen from that property. Up to now, the people of British Columbia have never been asked to pay property taxes on beautiful scenery which they can see but do not personally own.

Another objectionable aspect of the Assessment Act from a property owner's point of view is that if a number of people in your neighborhood manage to sell their homes at inflated prices the market value of your home, i.e. the assessed value, could then be increased and you could find yourself paying higher taxes as a result of your neighbors having sold their homes.

Ask somebody to ask the B.C. Assessment Authority if these suggestions are not true. Ask if they have not already drawn up their so-called 100 per cent assessment roles on this basis. Then, draw your own conclusions as to what the provincial government should be told to do with the NDP's Assessment Act. — Jack Fry, 1193 Goldstream Avenue.

Mystifying

At one time the arts were at the very centre and heart of western civilization. With the democratization of this civilization, and the proliferation of the bourgeois "nouveau riche" the arts have become sidelines or subsidiaries of the business community. Money, or the acquisition of wealth is now the centre of society and for most people paintings and such are simply another form of money. Probably the greatest redeeming feature of "paintings" in this day and age is that they do not drop in value with stock market fluctuations.

"Art" is big business and the centre of the business machine is the New York critic. The power diffuses from the grand critic of the influential gallery owners and university art course directors. From these the power passes to the corporate purchasers, rental agencies, art "banks" and of course to those impressionable purchasers of tuition, the students.

Finally, the nouveau riche, coffee-tables laden with art books which are floating investments on their own, the people who make it all possible by purchasing without question the most atrocious insults to civilized humanity.

When the original white on white was painted by the Russian painter Malevitch, shortly after the turn of the century, the message was concise.

Regarding the choice of the Greater Victoria art gallery jury, draw your own conclusions. I perceive a psychosis based on the intentional mystification of the experience of painting, reinforced by admission of the opposite, substantiated by the fear and desperation of the hubris which results from the bourgeoisie usurping a position about which they know no more than a critic knows about the experience of an artist (nothing).

Bloodthirsty Medium

By VINCENT CANBY
New York Times

In the very first sequence of "Scorchy," an inept, mindless little melodrama about cops and narcotics smugglers, one hoodlum corners another, sticks the muzzle of his revolver into the victim's mouth and says, "You talk too much." There was a time when the camera would have discreetly glanced away at that point. No longer. When the hoodlum pulls the trigger in "Scorchy," the camera appears to have moved in closer, the better for us to see how a man looks as the back of his head is blown off. His brains smear the camera lens.

It was 11:35 on an otherwise ordinary, perfectly acceptable morning when I witnessed the above scene on the screen of a scroungy Broadway movie theatre. I had a strong desire to say to-hell-with-it right then and leave. I didn't. I'm a creature of habit and so I stayed with "Scorchy" to the end. It's my job. As I've told myself in the past, I'm paid to watch and, after all, it's only a movie.

But "it's only a movie" no longer reassures as it once did. It's not that such random viciousness and graphically detailed violence are not properly distanced. They are. That's not the problem. I don't think that many adults mistake screen fiction for fact. The "Scorchy" actor wasn't actually killed. That's not what makes these films so aggressively abrasive. Rather, it's the assumption of the movie makers that we are all so jaded by this time that only mayhem, masterfully recreated by all sorts of technical tricks and the use of cosmetics, can grab and keep our interest. At the same time there is the lurking suspicion that perhaps the movie makers are right.

As pop music is now being magnified to the point where we can barely hear it, the volume of screen violence is being raised close to the point where we no longer see it. Our thresholds for hearing and seeing continue to rise, but for how much longer?

In Martin Scorsese's "Taxi Driver," one of the more seriously intentioned American films of the year, we are presented with the vividly photographed spectacle of a number of people being shot with a high-powered gun at point-blank range so that blood, guts and bone become the medium as well as the message of the movie. Marco Ferreri's "The Last Woman," which begins as a brilliant satire about a male supremacist, concludes with its hero trying to make amends by using an electric carving knife to remove his penis — on camera. Nagisa Oshima's "In The Realm of The Senses," the Japanese film that was seized by United States Customs officers before it could be shown officially at the just ended New York Film Festival, concludes with its heroine, who has loved her lover to death, slicing off his sexual organs. Pier Paolo Pasolini's last film, "Salo," based on the Marquis de Sade's "The 120 Days of Sodom," is an attempt to make political point out of scenes of systematized rape, castration and other forms of amputation, disembowelment, defecation and such. Grizzly," an unabashed copy of "Jaws" that features a rampaging bear instead of a shark, shows us a man's arm being ripped off and a horse being decapitated. In "The Omen" David Warner is very efficiently decapitated before our eyes and Lee Remick, who plays the devil's mum, is tossed out a window to her death. In "Burnt Offerings," a dad, played by Oliver Reed, is tossed out a window to his death, landing face down, his head pushing through the windshield of the car where his young son is waiting for him, the child thus being appropriately splattered with glass and dad's remains.

And on it goes, in films made by gifted, intelligent people as well as by hacks. Violence, which, I suppose, is the sensation most easily communicated by films, may not be more prevalent today that it ever was in movies, but because the means by which it is represented have become increasingly graphic, it begins to dominate all other circumstances. Are audiences so bloodthirsty that they demand this realism, or are they simply bored?

Each of us has a different tolerance for screen violence, a tolerance that varies according to the mood of the viewer and the content of the film containing it. Because I found Sam Peckinpah's "The Wild Bunch" a serious and moving film about the last days of the western frontier, I accepted without question the so-called "blood ballet" that concluded the film. Yet the violence in the same director's "The Straw Dogs" was intolerable — the film itself was so simple-minded that the climactic mayhem and murder looked to be nothing more than an exercise in brutality.

Serious artists can argue persuasively that violence is a metaphor for our times, but serious artists need serious audiences, and when I saw a screening of "The Wild Bunch" at a Times Square theatre, where the audience hooted and howled with pleasure at the blood-letting, I must admit to having had some reservation about my earlier defence of the picture. Are the audiences at Loew's State 1, who cheer and laugh during some of the rougher moments of "Marathon Man," reacting to a metaphor or to violence as style? The latter, I suspect. After all, violence — including the dental torture that provides "Marathon Man's" most terrifying sequence — may be defined as nothing more than an extreme form of rudeness, and rudeness is more or less how New Yorkers live.

Because "Marathon Man" is a beautifully acted and directed thriller, I find its violence bearable. Yet in more and more films like "Scorchy" and "Drum" and "Lipstick" — movies made without any art and with no purpose except to shock — violence of the graphic sort that is now possible becomes the point of the movie, instead of a means to some other end. This is what separates today's violent films from those of earlier decades (the 1930's' gangster films) that were in their own times thought to have gone too far. Explicit violence is as much the point of a film like "Scorchy" as explicit sex is the point of "The Devil in Miss Jones." It's no coincidence that as the public has come to accept the existence of pornographic films in the last decade, so has it come to accept films that are more and more brutally violent. They are part of the same movement.

A metaphor for the times?

By that I don't mean to confuse the run-of-the-mill porn films with films dealing in decapitation, torture and the like, only to emphasize that both kinds of films, in their explicitness and lack of reticence, are being directed at audiences that don't (or won't) think, and that have neither the time nor interest to be emotionally touched. They are looking for immediate sensations, which, in the case of violent films, are not unlike the cheap thrills one gets when riding a roller-coaster.

Unless one has a bad heart, roller coaster riding is harmless. The stomach settles down just as soon as one steps out of the car. The effects of movie violence accumulate. The more violent that films become in order to shock, the more violent they must become to continue to be shocking. The same graphic scenes of violence that penetrate dull brains, make those brains duller, more impervious to shock, so that succeeding films must go even further. The volume of screen violence must continue to be raised.

As it is, the audience's other expectations are lowered. Never, I think, have reason and coherence appeared to be in such short supply in films made for the mass American audience. And never, if the big Broadway movie theatres are representative of first-run theatres elsewhere in the country, has that mass audience been so tolerant of poor management, sloppy projection, high prices and ridiculous programming. On a recent Fireday night the audience at the National Tehatre on Broadway sat through an unscheduled 30-minute intermission between programs, only to be subjected to a short epic of sentimental baloney, "Spike, A montana Horseman," sponsored by Mobil and the start of the feature ("Burn Offerings") without sound.

The creeping second-rateness, which is as much responsible as anything else, including blood-lust, for films of sensation and violence, is as apparent in the theatres that show the schlock as in the schlock they show.

'Square Values and Square Politics' Win Out in U.S.

By MARK FRANKLAND

Listen to Herman Kahn, the well-known futurologist, lecturing to the police chiefs of America's big cities.

For the last 10 years, Kahn tells the supercops, East Coast liberals "did their best to wreck" America by laying down a misguided set of values and priorities. These values, according to Kahn, included health, ecology and the environment, social justice, the quality of life, happiness and hedonism.

There may be nothing wrong with all these things, Kahn says. "But you can't run a country on them."

Cautious Mood

Fortunately, things have taken a turn for the better. Americans, who are basically conservative (opinion surveys agree with Kahn on this), are now likely to get a government that better matches their inclinations. "Square values and square politics are in the ascendancy," Kahn assures the police chiefs, and both of this year's presidential candidates are "very square."

Kahn's talk to the police chiefs was just one of a myriad signs that this, in a cautious and in many ways ungenerous mood. Of course, most countries are conservative most of the time, but America has been through several years of change and conflict during which the so-called liberal voice was heard more loudly than others.

Liberals Muted

A liberal, in the American context, means someone who believes in the ability of government to engineer social change — which is willing to divert taxpayers' money into big government spending programs in the name of social justice and welfare and which thinks that government should protect the citizen from exploitation by big business.

What seems to have happened is not so much that the liberals are now being outshouted by others, but that the liberals are shouting less or scarcely at all. Here is an example:

A few months ago I talked with a professor of literature at one of New York's best-known universities. A man in his forties, he was typical of much that is best in the American intellectual: energetic, mentally agile, inquisitive.

He had been living in New York for several years and, he said, he loved it. It was a perpetual challenge. No matter how clever you were, or how beautiful, or how rich, you were sure to run into someone who was even cleverer, or richer or more beautiful. The city both demanded and stimulated energy.

I asked him about the difficulties of living there. Wasn't it a fact that crime or the fear of crime (which is almost the same thing) haunted many people and made them live their lives within a dreary cage of caution?

Addicts Blamed

My friend said he paid no attention to it. His old apartment in a pleasant old house had been burgled three times in as many months. He had moved into an expensive block of flats, which he had chosen chiefly because it had a round-the-clock guard on the front door.

He blamed the burglaries on a methadone treatment centre near the old apartment. These centres try to get heroin addicts off the drug by giving them chemically-produced methadone instead.

Fear of Blacks

This meant there were always a lot of addicts or near-addicts around (when I first met him in New York he had pointed out the methadone centre with some pride, for this particular one had pioneered the treatment).

He was also convinced that the men who robbed his apartment were black. There were a good many blacks in the neighborhood and many of the methadone centres' patients were black. By "black," it later turned out, he also meant Puerto Rican — a carelessness of speech quite untypical of him.

Blacks, he said, now scared him. He would avoid them in the street unless he noticed something about them, for example the wearing of suit, ties and white shirt (a uniform you'd scarcely ever see the professor in) that indicated they were "all right."

He told stories about the similar experiences of friends and colleagues, remarkable only in that they were so typical of this sort of horror story about blacks. What was striking was that on this subject his old openness of mind was gone.

Three burglaries in a short time is enough to take the smile from the face of the Cheshire cat, of course. But this man was close to writing off all blacks, although this was the sort of irrational attitude that he had scorned in others. He did not know, although it has been regularly mentioned in the New York Times, the paper he reads every day, that the unemployment of young blacks in cities like New York is now about 40 per cent (several times higher than the national average).

Chatting this year to Republican supporters of Ronald Reagan, I was struck by how many of them were eager to talk about crimes committed either against themselves or against people they knew. It is the old story of a generally apprehensive view of life going hand in hand with conservative politics.

The professor in New York could no more vote Republican than he could confuse John Updike with Kurt Vonnegut. But for the time being he is lost to the liberal cause. If he reads Herman Kahn's forecasts of the coming age of square values and square politics he may even say to himself, "and about time, too."

The Bridge-Builders

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

ALEXIS CREEK — The Chilcotin, one of the larger and wilder rivers of this province, is now spanned a few miles east of here by a brand-new suspension bridge that was built so a six-year-old could get to school.

It is a spectacular sight, swooping down from a high cut bank on the river's northern shore, crossing 280 feet of rustling blue green water, hanging at the southern shore on a 35-foot A-frame of peeled poles and then plunging into the earth.

Spectacular it may be, but unspectacularly was it done. Nobody up here talks about it much. If you want a bridge, you build a bridge, don't you? Well, the Plummer family needed a bridge.

Wayne and Trina Plummer operate Neil Harvey's Deer Creek Ranch on the south side of the Chilcotin, half-way between the Chilco Ranch home place and the Duke Martin bridge near Alexis Creek.

They have two children and as the oldest, Levi, neared his sixth birthday, they began to discuss how they would get him to the school bus on the Chilcotin Highway.

There is a road to the Deer Creek place and they could drive the boy each morning and afternoon to the school bus stop—but this would be 36 miles a day and the road crosses an alkali flat that becomes an impassable bog many times each year. Sometimes they must keep vehicles on both sides of the bog hole, leaving one and walking across to pick up the other.

It seemed simpler to bridge the Chilcotin. That way it would only be necessary to build half a mile of road from the ranch house to the river bank and another eight-tenths of a mile through Dan Lee's ranch to the main highway.

Jack Casselman, a rancher noted for his handiness, had just sold his Brittany Lake Ranch and had some time to spare. The idea appealed to him. He had never built a suspension bridge before.

The other bridge builder was Wayne Plummer's brother-in-law, Lynn Bonner, of Riske Creek, who is the general manager of three ranches owned by Harvey in this area. He, too, was strongly attracted to the notion.

The bridge is called the Cassel-Lynn to honor these two entrepreneurs, but, on the day I visited, Wayne Plummer was at the bridge, a hammer in his hand and a one-quarter inch hand-rolled cigarette butt smouldering at his narrow lips.

"Jack Casselman did most of the work," he said. "He went down to Vancouver and looked at some bridges there. He said there didn't seem to be much of a trick to it. It took him about two and a half months."

First, he pointed out, they bulldozed holes in the river bank and embeded concrete anchors, blocks 12 by 8 by 6 feet.

They snaked one-inch cables across the river, slung them on the A frame on the southern shore, and Jack began hanging straps and laying planks. He just began at one side and ended at the other side, that's all.

(Wayne is not a talkative man. What conversation he had to spare that morning he spent mostly on the price of beef, which he summed up finally in the short philosophic comment, "What the hell, somebody's got to be poor.")

The details of the bridge, as elicited that morning, are that the main cables are one inch thick and capable of holding 50 tons, the drop cables are 5-16ths steel and good for five or ten tons apiece, the cross-pieces for the walkways are Douglas Fir three-by-fours and the planking one-inch pine boards.

It had, he agreed, cost Neil Harvey a lot of money. For materials and for Jack Casselman's time, he had spent $8,000. This, by a quick calculation, amounts to between one twentieth and one thirtieth of the cost if it had been a government project, but it wasn't. Even if the government had helped, the price would have shot up. (Everybody knows that.)

Trina takes the little boy across each morning and afternoon on the back of a motorcycle. When the wind blows hard down the Chilcotin valley, the bridge has both a ripple and whip, she reported, and the fun goes out of cycling.

So they have obtained a brave old Volkswagen Beetle.

Wayne is now engaged in running vertical planks on the sides of the four-foot bridge deck as a safety measure.

The Volkswagen will still be too wide for the bridge but he calculates that he can haul out the welding torch, cut three inches off the fenders and running board of the car and make a neat fit of it.

Trina and Levi will be grateful when the wind blows, the snows come or when, as occasionally happens, the temperatures hit 40 below.

Yes, they had a bit of a party when the bridge opened. Even broke a champagne bottle over it, after first removing the contents, which should not be wasted. But after all it's just a bridge to get Levi to school, and was there any reason to write it up in the newspaper?

By coincidence, on the day we spoke, an announcement came from Ottawa about construction of the third runway at Vancouver International Airport. It has been studied for three years. The announcement was that the government was going to study it again.

Senate Held By Democrats

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Democrats retained control of the U.S. Senate Tuesday, ousting conservative Republican incumbents in New York, Tennessee and Maryland.

In a seat-for-seat swap, four Republican incumbent senators were defeated — but so were four Democratic incumbents.

Three senate committee chairmen were ousted while former UN ambassador Daniel Moynihan defeated Sen. James Buckley (R—N.Y.), and former Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, (D—Ohio) defeated Sen. Robert Taft, (R—Ohio).

In California, flamboyant S. I. Hayakawa whipped incumbent John Tunney.

Democratic Vance Hartke of Indiana, whose proposals to restrict U.S. imports and U.S. investment in foreign countries once caused concern in Canada, was overthrown by Republican Richard Luger, former mayor of Indianapolis and a one-time Rhodes scholar.

Another Democratic Senator who caused concern in Canada, Joseph Montoya of New Mexico, was defeated by former astronaut Harrison Jack Schmitt.

Montoya, whose state contains large potash mines, once accused Saskatchewan of selling the fertilizer ingredient in the United States at excessively-low prices and suggested duties be imposed.

NARROW VICTORY GOES TO CARTER

Board of Elections estimated that 400,000 absentee ballots had been mailed by local boards.

Under state law, any ballot received by 9 p.m. Tuesday — the hour the poll sclosed — was counted Tuesday and is included in the current total.

However, there was no way to immediately determine how many remained uncounted.

Shortly after Ford conceded, however, the Republicans dropped their protest.

The only man ever to occupy the presidency without being elected to national office, Ford also has become the first incumbent president to be defeated since 1932 when Herbert Hoover, also a Republican was swamped in the first Franklin Roosevelt landslide.

But within a half-hour, first of victory when he went to bed at 3:15 a.m. EST.

But withi naha lf-hour, first Wisconsin and then Mississippi — states, in which Carter had been leading — were confirmed for the Democrat, giving him the necessary electoral votes to assure victory.

Ford support continued to gather in other states — Illinois went his way; then his home state of Michigan — but by then the prize was out of reach.

Even with a near sweep in the mountain and Pacific Coast states, these were not enough to offset Carter's southern and eastern strength.

Carter, the first Georgia native ever and the first candidate of the Deep South since Zachary Taylor in 1848 to capture the presidency, won by rebuilding some key elements of the political coalition which Roosevelt put together in the 1930s.

He swept the entire south except for Virginia, captured New York and Pennsylvania, Texas and Florida and several key farm states.

He got heavy backing from labor, black, Spanish-American and urban voters.

The margin of victory was held down by the showing of Eugene McCarthy, who ran as an anti-party independent.

Campaigning with a minimum of funds and a volunteer organization with more enthusiasm than experience, the former Minnesota senator got only one per cent of the popular vote and no electoral votes.

But he cut into Carter's vote in half a dozen states, including Illinois, Iowa, Oklahoma and Oregon — enough to deny them to the Democrat.

Veto Frustration Over for House

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Firm control of the House of Representatives remained Tuesday in the hands of the Democrats by close to the 2-to-1 margin they held in the last Congress.

The gains mark the first time since Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society" days of 1964 that Democrats control both the White House and Congress, signalling the end of a frustrating fight with a Republican President over a string of vetoes.

With about two-thirds of the House races decided, most incumbents had been re-elected and the big class of 78 freshman Democrats had done especially well.

Their showing reversed the tradition that after a landslide victory, such as Democrats won in the House two years ago, the pendulum swings back two years later and wipes out much of their gains.

Voters generally were forgiving when they decided the fate of congressmen whose names had been linked with sexual incidents.

Only one, Democrat Allan Howe of Utah, was defeated in a bid for re-election. Representatives John Young, Joe Waggonner and John Dingell all won their races.

Howe was convicted this year of soliciting sex from a policewoman posing as a prostitute. His own party turned on him and sponsored a write-in candidate in the general election.

Howe was defeated by Republican businessman Dan Marriott, who got 35 per cent of the vote to 37 for Howe and eight per cent for the write-in candidate, Daryl McCarthy.

One other Democrat already had fallen victim. Wayne Hays of Ohio resigned from Congress in September, unable to continue after being charged by a former employee, Elizabeth Ray, with keeping her on the federal payroll to be his mistress.

Young handily defeated Republican Dean Halford in Texas's 14th District, despite Halford's attempt to make an issue of allegations by a former member of Young's staff, Colleen Gardner, that he required her to have sexual relations with him.

Dingell (Dem.—Mich.) handily won re-election despite an allegation by a Detroit prostitute that he was one of a number of politicians who frequented her brothel.

Waggonner, a Democrat, was unopposed in the general election in Louisiana's 4th District. He was briefly detained by Washington police last February on suspicion of soliciting a policewoman, but he was not charged.

Also Congress' first husband and wife team, Democratic Reps. Martha Keys of Kansas and Andrew Jacobs of Indiana, were not separated by the voters.

Both incumbent members were returned in a surprise victory for Keys and an endorsement of sorts for women's rights.

Mrs. Keys had been criticized severely in Kansas for her marriage last January to Jacobs.

Her opponent, Republican Ross Freeman, questioned whether she could give her full loyalty to Kansas with a husband from Indiana, and some of the campaign literature referred to her as the "Congresswoman from Indiana."

So Tight That It Hurt . . .

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Many Americans doubtless stayed home Tuesday, shrugging and saying "well, my one vote can't make much difference."

Consider this:

— In Hawaii, which put Carter on the brink of victory, about 7,000 votes separated the two.

— In Illinois, it was 50-49 for Ford—a margain of about 70,000 of 4.2 million voters.

— In Iowa, it again was Ford 50-49 — 13,000 votes out of1.3million.

— In Maine, 4,000 votes separated the men, with Ford winning 49-48 per cent and Eugene McCarthy probably costing Carter the state.

— In Mississippi, the state that put Carter over the top, it was 50-49 per cent for the Georgian.

— In New Jersey, almost 2.9 million cast ballots. Ford won it by 50,000 — again 50 to 49 per cent.

— In New Mexico the margin was less than 10,000 for Ford.

— Ohio was so close that at 6:30 a.m. it still was a toss-up with 4 million votes in, it was 49-49 and Carter led by 1,300 votes.

— Ford took Oklahoma by 7,000 votes out of more than 1 million.

— Oregon had almost 900,000 votes, but less than 4,000 kept Carter from carrying the state — and again McCarthy was the difference.

— The Ford margin was 5,000 in South Dakota.

— The president won by 23,000 in Virginia — 51 to 49 per cent, and almost 1.7 million residents voted.

— In Wisconsin, there were 2 million votes cast and Carter won by 33,000.

In all, 14 states were decided by less than 2 percentage points.

New Governor of Wash. Already Stepping on Toes

Times News Services

Dixy Lee Ray, the political wizard in non-politician's clothing, begins her reign of surprises, folksy wisdom and hard-nosed decisions 10 weeks from today when she becomes Washington's first woman governor.

Already she shows signs of not hesitating to step on toes as she shapes her administration in characteristic style.

Just minutes after claiming victory over Republican John Spellman Tuesday, she lashed out at newspapers which had endorsed her opponent.

And when she was asked when she planned to meet with outgoing Gov. Dan Evans to plan the transition, she snapped, "I'm not going to be pinned down to any particular time or any particular place. That's one of the problems with you reporters."

Her years as a marine scientist and as an EAC official led to her plea for "wise use, not preservation" of natural resources, and to her advocacy of nuclear energy.

"You cannot have a baby without dirty diapers," she said repeatedly.

Her stand in favor of continued oil tanker traffic in northern Puget Sound also got her in hot political water with environmentalists.

Asked her first priority for change, an expansive Miss Ray, crowed "Everything!?" She added: "It's time to turn around the policies and programs of the last 12 years. There are no magic answers . . . but working together we will bring a better, more responsive, more open government to this state."

DIXY LEE RAY
. . . all smiles

She said her election proves that the press doesn't rule the ballot box.

"Our success tonight is the failure of the newspapers to elect the people they want to elect," Miss Ray said.

She noted that 16 newspapers endorsed Spellman, "so they backed the wrong horse. Do you think I'm going to forget that right away?"

Democrats elsewhere strengthened their already powerful hold on U.S. statehouses giving them a historically high nation-wide advantage of 37 to 12.

One governorship controlled by an independent was not up for re-election.

Two heirs to famous family fortunes moved into the picture with victories by Republican Pierre du Pont in Delaware, and West Virginia Democrat Jay Rockefeller becoming the third member of his family to be elected as a governor.

Half of the states with governorships at stake opted for change. Democrats seized control of Missouri, West Virginia, and North Carolina as well as Washington while Republicans ousted them in Missouri, Delaware and Vermont.

He is now expected to use the biggest Republican-controlled state in the U.S. as a platform for national prominence.

HOW TO GET YOURSELF OUT OF DEBT

UN: Double Standard

NAIROBI, Kenya (AFP) — A Canadian told a United Nations agency Tuesday that the world organization has a double standard toward violations of human rights.

Yvon Beaulne, speaking to a conference of the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), criticized the tendency of the organization to emphasize certain violations of human rights while ignoring others of equal gravity.

He said that while racial discrimination is a violation of rights, other forms of discrimination based on political opinion, ideology, religion, nationality and physical handicap are equally wrong.

He said such violations are not limited to a particular region or group.

Mr. Beaulne said Canada cannot accept the view that a durable peace is an essential condition for respect of human rights. Although such a peace seems unattainable at present, it is not an excuse to postpone efforts to implement the principles of the United Nations.

He'll show this man how payments can be arranged on a controlled budget designed to work hand in hand with peak cash flow periods. Step by step he'll explain the differences between leasing and financing and the advantages of each. He'll explain it straight and to the point. He'll do all this because that's his job. Economist Hopeful

A drop in the value of the Canadian dollar against the U.S. dollar should help B.C. when the change is combined with an upswing in the forest industry, one of Canada's top economists says.

The Royal Bank's Dr. Ross Peters of Montreal told about 100 members of the Sales and Marketing Executives of Victoria that B.C. relies heavily on forestry exports — particularly to the U.S. — for its economic well-being.

So a decline in the value of the Canadian dollar, coupled with a normal upswing in the cyclical forest industry, should combine to increase consumer spending in this part of the country.

PETERS

Unemployment, however, will still remain high in 1977, Peters said because of a slow growth rate predicted for the Canadian economy.

But he said this does not mean we are not pulling out of the economic slump.

"It represents . . . a modest recovery by historical standards, but a recovery nonetheless."

And a fortunate consequence of weaker growth is lower inflation, he said.

Oil Costs Cut Husky Profits

CALGARY (CP) — James E. Nielson, president of Husky Oil Ltd., said Tuesday higher costs for refinery crude oil from the United States led to a drop in company profits for the first nine months of this year.

However, he said company operations for September were ahead of the same month last year.

Husky reported net earnings of $24 million or $2.41 a share compared to $29.7 million or $3.01 a share for the same period in 1975.

Nielson said higher U.S. refinery costs were not offset by markets for heavy fuel oil and asphault.

"Even though crude oil volumes were down for the period compared to last year, crude oil and natural gas production income has increased in both the United States and Canada," he said.

"Earnings from our subsidiary carbon operations also are up from last year's figures at the third-quarter mark."

He said some of Husky's traditional heavy oil markets in the U.S. were unavailable due to government restrictions.

This, combined with a heavy surplus of heavy oil in Western Canada, increased Husky's inventories and slowed production at its Lloydminster oil fields to about 70 per cent of capacity.

Expansion Planned

WINNIPEG (CP) — A five-year expansion program in Western Canada and a new merchandising strategy featuring low retail prices have been announced by Macleod-Stedman Ltd. of Winnipeg.

Company president Dennis R. Gibson said the building program includes more than 700,000 square feet of new retail space in several locations.

Between 70 and 80 new stores are planned in the area from northwestern Ontario to British Columbia as well as additions to some of the company's 280 existing stores.

Hank Janzen, vice-president of merchandising, said Macleods also plans to increase its 1977 advertising budget by 50 per cent and reduce prices on some items sold in most store departments.

New stores are to be built in Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Calgary.

EMPTY OFFICE GLUT SEEN FOR OTTAWA

OTTAWA (CP) — A union representing 18,000 federal public servants expressed concern Tuesday over the government's handling of its decentralization program.

Chesley Lockhart, president of the Professional Institute of the Public Service of Canada, also said the union was concerned about government delay in approving guides for the moves which he said would abruptly disrupt careers.

Earlier Tuesday, published reports said the glut of surplus government office space in the Ottawa region could reach seven million square feet by 1985, a situation that will be caused, in part, by the government's decentralization program.

The report said the massive amounts of surplus space that may occur indicate government planning has gone awry. While the public works department continues to plan to construct more federal buildings, other departments will be moved out of the Ottawa region, under the decentralization plan, to relocate in areas of high unemployment.

There have also been charges from unions, Opposition MPs and in published reports that the decentralization program will be expanded. The reports have said the government's scientific and research establishments, including the National Research Council, could be moved in a yet-undisclosed phase of the program.

However, Hugh Poulin, parliamentary secretary to Industry Minister Jean Chretien who is responsible for decentralization, has told the Commons the total number of government workers to be moved will be about 5,500 permanent and 6,100 temporary employees. Many will be clerks.

Last week, the government announced plans to move much of the veterans affairs department to Charlottetown, starting in 1980. It is the single-largest facet of the decentralization plan that has been announced and will involve the constructing of a new federal building in that city.

Telegram Hearings Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is being urged by rail union leaders to hold public hearings on whether the public still wants the telegraph service — a service these unions say is already being lost by default.

E. G. Abbott, executive-secretary of the Canadian Railway Labor Association, told reporters Tuesday the unions want the government to call a halt to further closings of telegraph offices across the country until public hearings are held.

Abbot said the unions are asking Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve to order the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to hold the hearings and stop further office closings.

The CRLA represents 17 rail unions with a total membership of about 100,000 rail workers. Included are members of telegraph unions at Canadian National-Canadian Pacific Telecommunications, the communications arm of the two major railways.

CN-CP Telecommunications has long been saying the public message service — telegrams and money orders — has been losing money. CN and CP operate co-operatively across the country with CN having offices in some cities and CP in others.

Abbot said CN-CP is planning to close many offices across the country by the end of the year, a move that would affect 1,500 employees. Not all would lose their jobs but some might be forced to move.

Dube and W. F. Harding, a CP Telecommunications official, said the telecommunications agencies have been losing between four and eight per cent in telegram business every year.

PM Listens To NDP On Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — NDP Leader Ed Broadbent appeared Tuesday to make some headway in the Commons in attempts to get the government to take measures to reduce unemployment this winter.

There were no promises, but Prime Minister Trudeau did not adopt the tough line against Broadbent that Manpower Minister Bud Cullen has expressed.

Cullen has brushed off an NDP proposal to reduce personal income tax as one of five steps aimed at increasing buying power, stimulating the economy, increasing production and creating jobs.

Broadbent described predicted unemployment rates this winter as "the highest since the Great Depression."

Unpublished statistic calculated by the Institute for Public Policy at the University of Toronto indicate the average unemployment rate in 1977 will be eight per cent, he said.

The unemployment rate has been about seven per cent for several months. Broadbent said the five steps as proposed by the NDP would reduce unemployment to three per cent in four years.

LeBlanc Sees No Problem In Enforcing 200-Mile Limit

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Although problems over boundaries remain, Fisheries Minister Romeo Leblanc says it should be smooth sailing next year when Canada declares a 200-mile offshore fisheries jurisdiction.

"I do not foresee difficulties," Leblanc told reporters after tabling in the Commons a cabinet order whereby a 200-mile zone will be set up Jan. 1, 1977.

The minister gave two reasons for his optimism that Canada can effectively police fishing operations in the new zone.

One is that next year is an "interim period" where existing rules on fish catch quotas will be applied. These are the rules agreed to by the 11-member International Commission for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries (ICNAF).

The second point is that Canada already has agreement with five nations responsible for 85 per cent of the foreign fishing efforts off Canadian coasts.

Those agreements with the Soviet Union, Poland, Spain, Portugal and Norway are based on acceptance of a 200-mile-offshore territory for Canada.

Leblanc said there were "difficult negotiations" ahead with the United States, France and Denmark to work out common boundaries in areas such as Georges Bank and St. Pierre-Miquelon.

It was in everyone's interest to find solutions to boundary difficulties, he said, because "we cannot move away from each other."

The minister said he did not foresee conflicts akin to the recent "Cod war" between England and Iceland over fisheries boundary disputes.

The 200-mile zone policy would give Canada power to enforce fishing rules off its coasts. It would licence foreign fishing vessels and determine who could catch what.

The aim is to revitalize declining fish stocks off the east coast mainly and the law will allow Canada to board vessels and even to confiscate catches if the rules are broken.

Increasing the offshore zone from the current 12 miles to 200 miles will give Canada jurisdiction over an additional 502,000 square miles off the east coast alone.

There would be an additional 128,000 square miles on the east coast plus a potential 421,000 square miles in the Arctic when Canada declares a 200-mile zone there next March.

When asked if Canada would be able to patrol that huge area, Leblanc expressed confidence that it could be done.

"No city will ever have enough policemen to place one on every street corner," he said, "but it remains that there are laws and penalties applying to everyone."

Sommers 'Hazy' on $600 Pension

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Sommers, once forestry minister under former premier W. A. C. Bennett, says he "may be a bit hazy" on whether Social Credit supporters offered him a $600 monthly pension for life just before he faced bribery and conspiracy charges in 1957.

Sommers became the first person in Commonwealth history to go to jail for crimes committed while he was a minister of the Crown when he was convicted in November, 1958.

He was sentenced to five years in prison and served two years and four months.

Sommers claimed in a weekend radio interview that a deal had been worked out with the attorney-general's department and he "got the big double-cross" when charges were also laid against three forest companies and three other men as well as himself.

The other charges were stayed when the minister was convicted of conspiracy and five specific charges of accepting bribes in connection with the issuing of forest management licenses.

Sommers gave a somewhat different account of the pension offer when interviewed Monday on television.

"I think the suggestion came from me in conversations I had with Mr. Skillings (Waldo Skillings, then a Social Credit Party supporter and later a cabinet minister) that I thought it would be a good idea if I went to the United States to continue my education there," Sommers said Monday.

"Now I may be a bit hazy on this fact. He offered me financial assistance. Now, I'm not sure, and I don't particularly want to change my story, but I'm not sure whether this financial assistance was to last for the duration of my university training or whether it would go on indefinitely . . ."

Robert Bonner, attorney-general at the time, said Monday he "hadn't the foggiest idea" what Sommers meant when he talked about a double-cross.

"It's a lot of baloney," said Bonner, now chairman of British Columbia Hydro. "The subject (of the charges) was never discussed outside of the department . . . the charges were based on evidence we had."

Skillings, who served as industry and development minister after the incident, said it happened too long ago "for me to comment."

Bennett was unavailable for comment.

Ray Williston, education minister at the time of the Sommers scandal, said Tuesday the Sommers case was never discussed at cabinet level. Williston said he surely would have known about any deals made with Sommers because he was the next lands and forest minister after Sommers.

ABSURD, ALCAN ARGUES

VANCOUVER (CP) — The recent decision in which a court dismissed contempt charges against 12 Alcan smelter workers was based on a "judicial absurdity," Allan McEachern, the company's lawyer, argued Monday.

McEachern, addressing the British Columbia Court of Appeal, was referring to the Sept. 14 decision by Mr. Justice H. E. Hutcheon of the B.C. Supreme Court.

The three appeal court judges reserved decision on Monday.

Mr. Justice Hutcheon held contempt of the B.C. Supreme Court when they disobeyed a back-to-work order from the that the workets were not in provincial labor relations board.

The contempt charges were pressed by Alcan against members of the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers after they defied the LRB order during the 18-day wildcat strike at the company's Kitimat smelter in June.

During the proceedings before Mr. Justice Hutcheon, the company had argued that the LRB order had been filed with the B.C. Supreme Court and thus had the full authority of a court order.

In dismissing the contempt motion, Mr. Justice Hutcheon upheld the union's argument that the contempt charges were invalid because they were filed after the LRB order had been complied with.

Mr. Justice Hutcheon held that the B.C. Supreme Court should not be used as a means of punishing those who disobey LRB orders.

He ruled that the jurisdiction of the court does not extend to punishment for breaches of LRB orders once compliance has been obtained.

No More Dams, Urges Barrett

VANCOUVER (CP) — Opposition Leader Dave Barrett called Tuesday for the end to all further dam construction in British Columbia and public disclosure of all information and studies related to B.C. Hydro, the Crown-owned power authority.

The New Democratic Party leader said in a speech to a service club that regardless of who is in power in B.C. certain dam commitments must be met and any future government is locked into them. He said the commitment on the Site One Peace River project must be fulfilled.

"But beyond that we should immediately move back to where the commitment was made to Hat Creek coal development," said Barrett. "We should stop the use of natural gas for electrical generation in this province — it's frankly too expensive. And we should move all our energies into the coal area."

He said that no more dam commitments should be made in B.C. and that public disclosures be made about Hydro borrowings.

"At the present time, the cost of completing that Columbia River project — the deal that was to cost absolutely nothing — now is $850 million," said the former premier.

"We've had to borrow that amount of money to complete our share of the Columbia River Treaty and we've had to borrow it in all kinds of markets."

Barrett said that two years ago, while the NDP was in power, the government borrowed $200 million from "the petro-dollar sources."

He said the government was attacked in the legislature because it refused to name the two Arab nations from which money was borrowed, although all other details of the deal were made public. He said one of the conditions of the borrowing was that the names not be made public but he offered to tell leaders of the other political parties and let them make the decision.

"Since we left office, $500 million has been borrowed on your (the public's) behalf by the government of B.C. . . . in late July."

He said that in August he wrote Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, asking for names related to the sale of $500 million in Hydro bonds and Oct. 29 received a reply in which the minister said: I regret to say I am not able to provide the information you have requested."

"Yesterday," said Barrett, "there was an authorization for another $200 million. We know that the $500 million was from the United States but we don't know the institutions involved.

MOTHER COMPENSATED IN DAUGHTER'S RAPE

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 38-year-old Lower Mainland woman who was forced to watch the rape of her daughter has been awarded $1,007 by the Workers' Compensation Board for mental angnish she suffered.

The award is among 36, totalling $107,689, given crime victims under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act during September.

A knife-wielding man forced his way into the woman's house and raped the daughter in her presence. The board does not make public names of those who receive awards.

Four rape victims also received awards ranging from $1,500 to $3,556.

A 49-year-old Vancouver woman beaten in a parking lot and left with permanent brain damage received the maximum award of a lump sum payment of $7,500 and a lifetime pension of $345 a month, to be administered on her behalf.

Two Prince George children of a man who shot and killed his 26-year-old estranged wife were awarded $50 a month each, to be administered by a public trustee.

Other large awards included $13,118 for wage loss and permanent hand and elbow injuries to an Interior woman beaten with a club while asleep by a male intruder, $12,029 to a Prince George man who suffered hearing loss in a scuffle and $10,000 to a Vancouver man beaten and robbed in his hotel room.

Skipper Spoke English, Faltered on Directions

SEATTLE (AP) — The captain of an oil tanker which strayed into the wrong shipping lanes in the Strait of Juan de Fuca spoke English but had trouble understanding radioed course corrections, the U.S. coast guard says.

Cmdr. Neal Nelson, head of the Coast Guard Vessel Traffic System, said Tuesday that other vessels, including a waiting escort tugboat, knew the 86,000-ton White Peony was travelling too far north of the inbound lane. But no one could make the Chinese captain understand the international boundary of the lane system, he said.

Gov. Dan Evans said Monday that the incident shows there is a need for better vessel traffic control systems and for better communication between refineries and those responsible for tanker traffic.

Nelson said the Coast Guard seeks money to expand radar surveillance into the strait. It now covers Puget Sound south to West Seattle and west to Port Angeles.

Nelson said visibility was good the night of Oct. 19-20, when the vessel was heading for Cherry Point with a cargo of crude oil. Its red lights were flashing to identify it as a tanker.

"Other ships complained about him. He acknowledged us in English but evidently didn't comprehend instructions," the officer said.

A pilot boat overtook the Peony seven miles east of the Port Angeles pilot station. A pilot went aboard and proceeded with the tanker to Cherry Point.

The tanker was well within the designated manoeuvering area at the time, Nelson said.

Inbound ships are not obliged by maritime law to use the vessel-lane system until they reach Port Angeles, where they must take on a pilot.

Pilot Penalized After Crashing

PENTICTON (CP) — The pilot of a small plane which crashed into Skaha Lake while making a landing approach last June has been fined $1,000 in provincial court.

Harvey McGowan, 46, of Princeton was the pilot of the plane which apparently had engine failure and crashed into the lake on its approach to the city airport June 10.

McGowan and his wife, Thelma, both received minor injuries. They were rescued by a nearby boat on the lake.

The fines include $500 for not having a valid pilot's licence, $300 for providing false information to investigating authorities and $200 for failing to carry out the proper safety checks.

CUPE Votes Strike

PRINCETON (CP) — Local 900 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees has voted 93 per cent in favor of taking strike action if necessary to settle a labor dispute with School District 17.

The previous agreement for 23 non-teaching staff members expired June 30 and contract negotiations broke off last month.

CUPE is asking for an increase in wages of 15 per cent and the district has offered a three-per-cent wage increase.

Curfew Imposed

COQUITLAM (CP) — Council has unanimously agreed to impose a midnight curfew on all juveniles under 16 years but over 15, and an 11 p.m. curfew on those aged 15 years and under. RCMP Inspector M. A. Young told council Monday that he endorses the curfew concept although he initially opposed it in nearby Port Coquitlam.

Project Approved

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — City council has approved a $10 million provincial building project that is expected to rejuvenate part of the downtown area. The project is to be built on city-owned land.

Road Repair Agreement

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — City council has accepted a multi-million-dollar highways and road improvement agreement with the provincial government.

The program is the result of the Oct. 7 cabinet meeting here with Highways Minister Alex Fraser.

The former New Democratic Party government promised the highways department would maintain rural roads now in the city limits until 1980 and upgrade them to city standards.

The highways department will undertake reconstruction of about $2.5 million of rural and urban roads, about 31 miles in all.

More than $10 million in new road construction also will be done.

Clark Won't Snitch on Tories If They Tell Him of Conflicts

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Joe Clark said Tuesday he will attempt to keep secret any conflict-of-interest cases that might involve Conservative MPs.

He confirmed he has asked his MPs to tell him on a confidential basis if they have had business dealings with the government that might embarass the party.

He added he does not intend to make such information public.

"My interest is in being informed myself," Clark said. He will discuss any conflict-of-interest situation with the MP involved to see it does not happen again.

Clark's comments followed disclosures that Conservative MP Peter Bawden (Calgary South) has been involved in business deals with the Liberal government since he was elected in 1972.

After Clark learned of the deals, he wrote a confidential letter to his MPs asking them to outline involvement they might have in companies which have significant amounts of business with the government.

In the letter—a copy of which was obtained by The Canadian Press — Clark said he was asking for the information because "we probably can assume that the government is scanning all its files and records for material of possible embarrassment to us."

He asked his MPs to tell him of any connections which the government "might be tempted to use against us in one way or another" simply as preventive medicine.

Earlier in the Commons, New Democrat House Leader Stanley Knowles unsuccessfully attempted to gain House approval for a motion that would have referred the Bawden deals to a committee for investigation.

Bawden told the House on Monday that Emden Ltd., a company in which he is sole shareholders, had sold an airplane to the RCMP for $120,000 and a trade-in.

He said another Bawden company — Peter Bawden Drilling Services Ltd. — sold an airplane in 1973 to the transport department for $280,000.

Emden also owns a hangar at Calgary International Airport which has a lease with the transport department. And that company has a subsidiary — Business Flights Ltd. — providing fuelling service and hangars to government and other planes.

Clark said he has set up a small committee headed by Conservative Douglas Neal (Moose Jaw) to draw up some conflict-of-interest guides for MPs.

WORKER DEATHS' PROBE PROMISED

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bette Stephenson agreed Tuesday to look into a recent series of deaths among workers at a Toronto asbestos pipe plant.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis raised the question in the legislature, saying five long-time employees of the Johns-Manville Ltd., plant have died of lung and stomach cancer within the last two months.

He said X-rays of the workers in 1975 and 1976 did not show the severity of their conditions and asked Dr. Stephenson whether the ministry had more accurate testing methods.

The minister said the matter had not been brought to her attention and promised to look into it.

Lewis said outside the legislature that the workers were declared fit by Workmen's Compensation Board doctors in June but were having parts of their lungs and stomachs removed in August.

Charlie Neilson, president of the United Chemical Workers local at the Johns-Manville plant, said in an interview the situation with veteran employees is desperate and board physicians are doing a poor job of diagnosis.

Lewis said he is also concerned about a pattern of cancers that is developing in workers at the plant.

Clark Against PetroCanada

OTTAWA (FP) — Oppositon Leader Joe Clark says a Progressive Conservative government would move to "wind down" PetroCanada, the federal petroleum company established by the ruling Liberals during the minority government days when the New Democratic Party held sway.

In an interview, Clark explained that the party policy to attempt to 'sell PetroCanada, either in whole or in pieces, to industry is part of a broader PC policy of trying wherever posible to minimize the proportioon of Gross National Product spent by government.

With PetroCanada, another over-riding reason is Clark's long-time concern that the federal government should not normally play both the umpire and the player, as it is so obviously doing now in the oil and gas industry. Such a conflict only distorts the federal regulatory role.

In this regard, he rejected the suggestion that he was reflecting the outspoken views of many Calgary oilmen, who have resented PetroCanada as a government intrusion into an industry better left to industry.

A major bone of contention among oil companies is the proposed preferential treatment to be given PetroCanada in the federally-controlled North, with regard to acquisiton of Crown lands and wth regard to regulaitons to give PetroCanada a 25 per cent interest in certain oil and gas plays, without Petro Canada having to share in past exploration costs.

MANITOBA TO TEST AIB PACT

WINNIPEG (CP) — Attorney-General Howard Pawley says the Manitoba government will ask the Supreme Court of Canada to rule on the validity of the province's anti-inflation agreement with Ottawa.

Pawley said Tuesday the province has agreed to a request by the Manitoba Government Employees Association (MGEA) to bypass the Manitoba Court of Appeal.

Last month, the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench rejected the MGEA's motion to have the agreement declared invalid.

Pawley said the government's decision to go straight to the supreme court was made to minimize costs as well as time.

"There is no reason to deal with it at the court of appeal — it's going to end up at the supreme court anyway," he said.

Rubbish More Proper —Danson

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson gently chided a government information officer Tuesday for describing statements by Conservative MP Tom Cossitt as "a lot of crap."

"In this particular case, a more proper word might have been rubbish," Danson said in a written reply to a question by Cossitt.

Dave McIntosh, adviser on communication policy for the National Capital Commission (NCC), appeared on national television last September and said statement made by Cossitt on the prime minister's summer home located on NCC territory was "a lot of crap."

Whelan Cool To Surtaxes On Food

OTTAWA (CP) — A surtax imposed on food imports from the western United States would be of little help to producer incomes in British Columbia, says Argiculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

Whelan made the comment Tuesday when asked about the likelihood of legislation to block potato imports from the U.S. into B.C.

"A surtax wouldn't guarantee them a thing and they know it," he said. "We think the producers are getting a fair deal through the stablization plan and that this particular situation will resolve itself."

The B.C. growers asked for a surtax last summer. They complained that low-priced potatoes imported from Washington, Oregon and Idaho were under-mining the domestic market and depressing prices paid to producers.

70% Interest Legal?

OTTAWA (CP) — Interest rates between 70 per cent and 100 per cent could be legal under a consumer credit bill designed to curb loan-sharking, Liberal and Progressive Conservative MPs said Tuesday.

Herb Gray (L-Windsor-West) told the Commons he had learned the government was considering "a rate of at least 70 per cent per annum."

Ron Huntington (PC-Capilano) said he understood the interest rate allowed by the bill would be seven times the prime interest rate, currently 10½ per cent.

The Commons was debating legislation to protect consumers borrowing money. It would also set a criminal interest rate, still undecided, which would result in fines of up to $10,000 and jail terms between two and five years for every count if exceeded by lenders.

Arnold Peters (NDP-Timiskaming) said an interest rate above 10 per cent was usury and should be considered loan-sharking.

Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott said outside the Commons that the minimum 70 per cent criminal rate "is Mr. Gray's statement, not mine."

The minister said that he too considered 70 per cent too high a ceiling. He stressed that the rate would be decided in government regulation after discussion with other MPs and witnesses at parliamentary committee hearings after the debate.

Criminal interest would also apply to discounting at excessive rates cheques for income tax refunds, welfare or other government payments.

A consumer affairs official said a formula setting the criminal interest rate at seven times the prime interest rate was considered by the department when the bill was being drafted. But the formula never made it into the final bill.

Some officials think a multiplier is too crude and could lead to the conviction of legitimate lenders if the prime interest rate goes down, say, to six per cent.

Peter Mueller . . . mental well-being too

Mr. Atlas!

. . . Move Over for Mr. Mueller

If Victoria's Peter Mueller had his way, he'd be in Montreal this weekend flexing his muscles.

Peter is one of only two competing body builders living here and he'd like to be where the action is. And what more action could there be, indeed, for musclemen than posing in the Mr. Canada and Mr. Universe contests at the same time!

But he can't afford it and sponsors are hard to come by so Peter, a mechanic who works for himself, will stay here and lift a few cars up and down instead.

Let's be serious, though, for Peter Mueller, unlike most people in Canada, is very serious about body building. He trains religiously for two hours every evening, lifting weights and doing exercises in the YM-YWCA gym. And he dreams one day of becoming Mr. Universe.

His idol is the legendary musclebound Arnold Schwarzenegger, who hailed from the Austrian town of Graz where Peter was born and who has just retired from competition after winning the Mr. Olympia crown six times and the Mr. Universe title five times.

There are one or two other young men doing body building at the Y and a couple working out in a gym in Langford but they are just beginners and aren't ready for competition. And Mueller complains there isn't much in Victoria to help them get ready — "no instructors, nothing."

Right now, only Peter and his friend Dick Reid, a 27-year-old Victoria-born bulldozer driver, compete. Each year they enter contests like Mr. B.C. Coast, which Peter has won, Mr. B.C., which Dick has won; Mr. Pacific Coast in either Seattle or Portland, and Mr. Canada is the venue is near enough.

Of course, Mr. Canada is the big one for Canadian body builders as the winners of each of the three different height divisions get an all-expenses-paid trip to the Mr. Universe contest. Last year, that one was in South Africa and Victoria's two musclemen tried hard in the Mr. Canada contest in Vancouver to earn the right to represent their country.

Dick was third in his class (medium height) and Peter, after placing fourth for three years in a row in his class (tall), failed to place.

But Peter won't think of giving it up.

"You have to diet strictly and train hard," he says. "I don't eat any garbage foods, no potatoes or white bread, and I sweat for a couple of hours at the end of each working day and sometimes I say what's it all for? But I stick with it and think maybe I'll go somehwere. Maybe in two or three years I'll win Mr. Canada and go on to Mr. Universe, who knows."

But what makes men take this kind of thing up in the first place?

"Well, when I was a boy in Austria, I used to look at the pictures of the strong men in the magazines and I thought they looked good," Peter explains. "I learned and then taught judo and took up body building when I came to Canada in 1968."

Now aged 30, the six-foot one-inch Mueller weighs 220 pounds and when he's competing has a 51-inch chest and a 30-inch waist.

"I feel much better for it," he says. "I'm much stronger and healthier, you wouldn't believe it."

Raised on a farm and already possessing a solid body, Dick Reid started body building basically to improve his physical build. And he has done just that. At five-foot seven and-a-half inches he now weighs 175 pounds and has a 48-inch chest and a 27-inch waist.

Dick has been into body building for more than eight years but says he isn't a competitive person.

"Peter prods me into it every time a contest comes round," he says with a grin. "I go along and I really enjoy it."

"There's a really close friendship between the guys and it's more like a learning experience than a competition," says Reid, who is single.

And there's none of the cutthroat cattiness usually associated with women's beauty contests.

"A guy will tell you how to improve your performance an hour before you're going to be competing against him," Dick says.

"But to me, it's a personal thing," he says wistfully. "It's a mental well-being from knowing I'm in good shape."

Peter, who is married and has one small child, loves the contests. His wife Rini does too and she goes to watch all those that are not too far away.

"Each time, there is prejudging in the morning and the afternoon and then there is the show for the public at night," he says.

"You just pose and you show your muscles," Peter explains. "Everyone has his own music — whatever he wants to pose to — and you probably do 10 or 12 poses and that's it. They judge you on size, definition and symmetry."

A big crowd packed the Queen Elizabeth Theatre in Vancouver for last year's Mr. Canada contest but Peter says the following in America is far greater.

"In Canada, if somebody sees you they say look at that musclehead and all that rubbish, but it's not like that in the States.

"People love to see a beautiful woman and it's the same with the guys, too — a fat slob doesn't look so good on the screen as Steve Reeves does."

Reeves, of course, star of several epic movies, is the world's most famous body builder.

"I don't feel I'm any better than a fat guy, though," Peter points out. "I just like body building and I feel healthier for it."

And he admits with a parting smile, people are getting a little better here.

"At first, when I used to go down to Willows Beach in a bathing suit, they'd be people who'd say 'Hey, look at that big guy!' And they'd all stare. But now they don't.

"Once in a while, maybe, a small boy will open his eyes wide and say:

"Hi Muscles!"

Abortions Legally Accepted, Euthanasia Next—Lawyer

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A lawyer and mother of five said in Victoria Tuesday that where abortion law allows killing of the unborn, euthanasia, legalized killing of the elderly for example, can't be far behind.

Gwen Landolt of Toronto, president of the anti-abortion Alliance for Life, said most pro-abortionists now concede a foetus is a living being but argue not all life deserves the same protection.

"Traditionally there has been a thread running through the country's law covering all ages which says no one can take a life without answering for it.

"We say, break the thread here (with easy abortion) and the precedent is set for all other vulnerable groups and it would be inconsistent not to see the practice spreading.

"If you can kill the unborn now, watch out for what's going to happen to the aged."

In an interview before speaking at St. Patrick's school Tuesday night, Mrs. Landolt said the sort of thing she's talking about has already appeared in California, Hawaii and Florida.

The California legislature recently passed a bill which removes the legal onus under certain conditions for doctors to resuscitate a patient.

In Hawaii, she said a family can now decide the extent of care which a relative should get under certain conditions, and the bill permitting that even refers to euthanasia, noting it as a practicality because the law now permits control over life and death through abortion.

And in Florida, a twice-defeated bill which equates the value of a life with usefulness is before the state government again. If approved it would see an end to medical treatment of mongoloid children who become sick.

"Everybody has value because they're here and a human being," she said. "Nobody stands in judgment on another's value of life enjoyment."

On the dimensions of the abortion issue, she said about 42,000 Canadians were killed during the six years of the Second World War. In 1974 alone, about 48,000 were killed by abortions.

Recent studies have shown about 70 per cent of abortions are being performed on single women who are deliberately using the operation as a method of birth control.

Most abortions are performed about the 10th week of pregnancy when there is perfectly natural depression, other studies have shown. The depression passes to be replaced with a sense of anticipation and fulfilment.

With more than 200,000 abortions in Canada since 1969, age groupings in the population are becoming unbalanced.

"In some Toronto parks, they're taking out the swings and putting in benches."

The trend raises the question of whether a smaller young generation will be willing or able to pay for the social benefits of a larger old population.

Mrs. Landolt said that Hungary, which along with other central European countries had liberal abortion laws for about 20 years, has reversed itself and now has strict controls.

Among problems which led to the change: more than half of hospital beds occupied by abortion cases. About 10 per cent of women bearing premature children after earlier having had abortions.

LANDOLT
. . . "watch out"

The Japanese, who have had easy abortion regulations, are becoming increasingly worried about infanticide, she said. They have had to close some bus depot lockers because women were abandoning their infants in them.

That view of life as cheap stems from ease of abortions, she said.

Mrs. Landolt said the Alliance wants a free vote in parliament on stricter abortion law and she thinks it will be a major issue in the next federal election, as it was in the American election just concluded.

She said the Alliance will concentrate its efforts on the 52 federal ridings across Canada where MPs were elected by a majority of less than 2,000 votes.

Stormy Seas Facing Gov't Over Housing

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government will be in for a rough ride if it attempts to dictate to municipalities what kind of housing requirements they have to meet.

This was the predominant reaction of municipal leaders to a report on housing, prepared by a joint provincial-municipal committee, which was released Tuesday.

The report recommends the housing minister be allowed to provide regional districts with estimates of the quantity and types of housing required to meet housing objectives.

The regional district would then allocate these requirements to the various municipalities, which would have to fulfil them.

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said it will be terrible if a council had to ignore the wishes of residents and provide for another 10,000 people just because "Big Brother says so."

He said Oak Bay is aware that it will have to assume its share of inevitable growth but members of council feel the people in the area should have a say.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Tuesday the report will form the basis for legislation at the next session but did not indicate what recommendations would be adopted.

The report, written by Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, says one of the problems causing a shortage of housing is that municipal councils are more concerned with protecting the interests of the existing population who elect them than welcoming newcomers.

"I can't imagine any more serious case of tunnel vision than that," said Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region Board.

'Bloody Insult,' Says Malcolm

He said the provincial government has been ignoring municipalities for years and now a committee attacks the municipalities for responding to those who elected the leaders.

Campbell said the government will be in great difficulty if it attempts to solve the housing problem by imposing housing quotas on the municipalities and regional districts.

Campbell labelled as a "backward step" a recommendation in the report that the principle of land-use contracts be scrapped.

He said he would have hoped the committee would have been more positive and come up with modifications to the perpetual features of the contracts and a method of accelerating their implementation.

Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm said it is "a bloody insult" for the committee members to assume the provincial government knows more about the housing problem than the municipalities.

He said housing is one of the most serious problems facing municipalities and the report is attempting to shift the blame to municipalities instead of dealing with high labor costs in B.C. and geographical factors which make planning difficult.

Joe Bourque, acting mayor of Saanich, said there is no question the process for getting housing developments approved at the provincial and municipal level is a bureaucratic maze.

With the co-operation of councils and the provincial government the process could be streamlined, he said.

Bourque said it is time councils direct their attention at providing houses at a reasonable price, in the $35,000 range and lower.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said the report's recommendations sound wonderful but aren't too practical unless the provincial government takes over the zoning of municipalities.

Young agreed with one of the report's recommendations, that zoning bylaws could be amended by a simple majority rather than by two-thirds of council members as is the case now.

Nematode Controls Knocked

Roy Messum, chief of the federal plant protection division of the department of agriculture, has left for Ottawa to discuss proposals for stricter regulations to control golden nematode in the Central Saanich quarantine area.

Mainland growers have complained that regulations for controlling golden nematode — a microscopic worm which severely cuts potato crop yields — need updating.

CORPORAL DEMOTED

A three-man disciplinary court martial Tuesday demoted Master Corporal Adolph Gustav Plewa to the rank of private after finding him guilty Monday of conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline.

The charge was in connection with Plewa's duties as a mess manager at the junior ranks mess at CFB Esquimalt between Oct. 20, 1973, and Dec. 31, 1974, and involved the theft of $1,400 from coin operated machies.

Plewa's lawyer, civilian Robert Johnston, of Victoria, introduced a number of written commendations from Plewa's superiors Monday and brought in five character witnesses in Tuesday's mitigation process.

Johnston told the court Monday that his client could take any form of punishment except dismissal from the service. He said Plewa, 46, has already signed over his pay allotment to begin repayment of the $1,400.

Plewa has been in the Canadian Armed Forces for 19 years.

Two others charged after investigation of the club's affairs earlier received prison terms and were dismissed from the service.

Robert Allan Hanner, a former president of the mess, was sentenced to four years in prison and Michael Joseph Sylvio Dalrymple, a former vice-president, received a one year sentence.

The court also stayed a charge of theft relating to the $1,400 and found Plewa innocent of conspiracy with a former bar manager to steal money from the coin-operated machines.

Slim Pickings in Summer Killed UVic Goal for Many

A lack of jobs in B.C. this summer was one of the main reasons 24 per cent of the students accepted by the University of Victoria in the spring failed to register in September.

Of the 2,900 applicants accepted by the university, 700 or 24.1 per cent did not follow through with their plans.

UVic administrative registrar G. J. Smiley wanted to know why so he mailed a questionnaire to 650 of them. (The other 50 were from outside North America).

A reply was received from 296 no-shows (46 per cent). It was found the main reason — 37.1 per cent of respondents — ended up going to another university or college.

In his report to the UVic Senate, Smiley concluded that "the province's economic situation this summer obviously contributed to a fair number of no-shows."

The lack of student housing was given by 14 students (4.7 per cent). Smiley concluded the housing situation "did not affect very many people this year."

Other reasons for not attending university included the lateness of admission — students who either applied late or who had to wait a long time to find out what transfer credit they were going to be awarded — taking a job, uncertain future plans, travelling, lack of transfer credit, health, lack of evening courses and the program wanted was not offered.

Of the students who replied, 91 said they would apply again next year.

"We may see a jump in first year enrolment next fall," Smiley suggested.

Smiley said he was surprised 36 students went instead to out-of-province universities.

"This . . . indicates that a large number of students are applying to at least two institutions and are not notifying the institution that they are not planning to attend.

"We may need to implement some type of control mechanism to alleviate this situation," his report says.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. What is the highest unclimbed mountain in the world and what is its name? M.C.

A. All the highest mountains have been climbed. The highest one is Mount Everest, which rises to a height of about 5½ miles above sea level. It is in the Himalaya range, on the frontiers of Tibet and Nepal, north of India. It was first climbed in 1953 when Sir Edmund Hillary of New Zealand and Tenzing Norgay, a Nepalese Sherpa tribesman, reached the top on May 29. The mountain is named for Sir George Everest, a British surveyor-general of India. Hillary and his companion were part of a British expedition led by Sir John Hunt.

Silence the Foghorn—City

City council wants to close the Foghorn cabaret at the James Bay Inn, source of numerous complaints from residents on south Government Street.

At its informal caucus Tuesday, council decided to request the Liquor Administration Branch to lift the hotel's cabaret licence.

Aldermen have no objection to the hotel keeping its cocktail bar licence.

Mayor Mike Young said the problem stems from the fact there is no regulatory distinction between a cabaret and a cocktail lounge. When the hotel had only a cocktail bar it had few serious complaints, but little patronage.

The [illegible] is heavily patronized, "and I understand (according to residents) it is a pretty painful situation, particularly on a weekend," the mayor said.

Most of the complaints revolve around closing time at 1 a.m.

"I like my rock and roll, but not at 1:30 in the morning," commented Ald. John Hayes.

He said the hotel should be made to restrict its operation, adding he thinks the site would be ideal for a neighborhood pub.

Referring to the early morning clamor, Young said, "It's almost as bad as bagpipes."

The inn owners will be notified of council's position and will have an opportunity to make a submission. A regular meeting of council Nov. 25 will deal with the matter.

Owner-manager Bill Wellburn said today he is "not very happy" about the licence threat and blamed "one certain party" for the complaints which led to council's action.

"We take this very seriously," he said, promising a reply when council considers the formal resolution later this month.

"We've done various things — like special duty police hired at our expense to patrol near the front door from 11:30-1:30.

"But we get blamed for every goddam thing that happens in the neighborhood," Wellburn said.

The hotel has never been in difficulty with the Liquor Administration Branch and always co-operated with it, he added.

Meanwhile, police attention to the hotel will be maintained in a bid to curb rowdyism, vandalism, drunkenness and noise.

Deputy chief Les Mottershead reported earlier the only permanent relief for residents would be the lifting of the cabaret licence.

Mottershead said all liquor outlets have problems at closing time, but the James Bay Inn happens to be the only one in the city of Victoria located in a district that is primarily residential.

BRIGHT PROSPECT for international gymnastics honors in future years, little Elfi Shlegel of Toronto goes through routine on balance beam during meet Tuesday night in Toronto. Elfi, a 69-pounder of five-feet, five-inches, was fourth over-all in women's competition. She tied for first place in vault event.

DELESALLE TIES FOR THIRD PLACE

TORONTO (CP) — Teodora Ungureanu of Romania, double medal winner at the Montreal Olympics, won the women's over-all title and awards on three individual apparatuses Tuesday night at an international gymnastics meet.

Ungureanu, 15, who won a silver medal in the uneven bars and a bronze in the balance beam at Montreal, won both these events as well as the floor exercise — with a meet-high score of 9.7 to finish with 38.10 points and first place. Andrea Bieger of East Germany was second with 37.20 points and Anna Pohludkova of Czechoslovakia was third with 36.95 points.

Koji Gushiken, a 20-year-old student from Japan, won the men's over-all title, finishing with 56.75 points, including wins in the rings, vault and high bar.

Jiri Tabak of Czechoslovakia was second with 56.05 points. Eberhard Gienger of East Germany, the defending men's over-all champion, finished in a tie for third with Philip Delesalle of Victoria at 54.45 points.

Delesalle, making his first appearance since the Montreal Olympics, finished first in his specialty — the pommel horse — with a score of 9.5 and took the parallel bars with a score of 9.4. It was Delesalle's best-ever performances.

Nigel Rothwell of Windsor, Ont., the 19-year-old Ontario champion, was last over-all of the 10 competitors in the men's competition.

Elfi Schlegal of Toronto was fourth over-all in the women's competition. Schlegal, 12, finished tied for top spot in the vault with Bieger. Each received scores of 9.4.

A crowd of 16,257 saw 20 competitors from 10 countries take part in the meet at Maple Leaf Gardens.

Cats Battle Kings to Tie

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The goaltending of Glen The goaltending of Glen Hanlon of Brandon Wheat Kings and Murray Bannerman of Victoria Cougars stood out as the obvious feature in Tuesday's 2-2 tie between the Western Canada Hockey League teams.

Yet the lovers of old-fashioned basics were able to detect another pleasing aspect of hockey in the game at Memorial Arena.

The wrist shot, as Brandon uses it, doesn't seem to be a neglected fundamental.

In recent years hockey-playing youngsters have concentrated on perfecting yhe sometimes-impressive slap-shot while neglecting the wrist shot or the backhand.

Brandon's players buck the trend. In Tuesday's 2-2 sawoff as well as last Saturday's 3-2 victory by the Cougars, Wheat Kings indicated a strong liking for the wrist shot.

Brandon's preference, by design rather than by accident, may be the start in explaining the team's impressive record in the league this season. Dunc McCallum, coach of the team that has won 13 games, tied two and lost but two, admits "we work on it (the wrist shot)."

Brandon players, from the top of the faceoff circle and in closer to the opposition's goal, will rarely try the slap shot. Wrist or snap shots are preferred.

Bannerman, who has looked at a fair share in his last two games, firmly feels that is why "the Wheat Kings are the best shooters in the league."

Bannerman looked at 27 shots Tuesday. Only a few were slap shots, and most of those were from the point positions from just inside the blueline.

Defenceman Rick Hendricks, an outstanding performer for a second straight fame, and Archie Henderson, playing in his first game of the season, scored Victoria's goals. Ray Allison and McCrimmon scored for the Wheat Kings before 2,128 fans.

Hull called only 14 minors, eight to the Cougars and six to Brandon in a game that Philadelphia Flyers' scout Jerry Melnyk said was "the best I've seen this season."

Both McCallum and Victoria coach Pat Girmell agreed with Melnyk and the tie was indeed a fair result.

Brandon, a highly-disciplined team, took a 1-0 lead but trailed 2-1 early in the third and salvaged the point when Allison scored at 5:56 of the final frame.

The result moved Victoria into sole possession of first place in the Western Division, one point ahead of New Westminster Bruins. Brandon, running away with the Eastern Division, is 15 points ahead of second-place Saskatoon.

The Blades gained one point, however, by scoring a 10-6 victory over Flin Flon Bombers in Tuesday's only other game.

Cowboys Fly On One Line

By The Canadian Press

Calgary Cowboys extended their unbeaten streak to five games Tuesday night when they defeated Minnesota Fighting Saints 4-3 but coach Joe Crozier still isn't happy with his World Hockey Association team.

"I am happy to get the points but not happy with the point," said Crozier, whose Cowboys climbed out of the West Division basement with the victory.

Crozier complained that one line, the combination of Lynn Powis, Rick Sentes and Warren Miller has been doing all the work for the Cowboys.

"The same people are doing it for us. They're checking all the big lines and scoring. We're not getting a lot from most of the other forward lines.

"We've won four in a row but some of our guys are not contributing. When does it start?"

Sentes, Powis, Paul Terbenche and Ron Chipperfield had a goal each for the Cowboys, who began the season with six successive defeats, tied their seventh game and then won four in a row.

In Tuesday's other games, San Diego Mariners nipped Birmingham Bulls 4-3, Phoenix Roadrunners dropped Quebec Nordiques 5-3 and Houston Aeros defeated Winnipeg Jets 3-1.

Powis scored the winning goal with two minutes to play, picking up a rebound with two minutes to play and scooping it past a sprawling Mike Curran, the Minnesota goalie.

Orr Has 'Only So Many Miles'

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Orr's agent says the hockey star will have to play an even more cautious brand of hockey if he expects his fragile left knee to hold up.

"Orr is not considering retirement but he realizes now that he has to change his style," lawyer Alan Eagleson said Tuesday after his client underwent an orthoscopic examinaton on the knee.

The defenceman won't have to undergo an operation, but Chicago Black Hawks will have to get along without him for at least two weeks.

This is the second time in the month-old season the 28-year-old native of Parry Sound, Ont., has missed games because of the knee.

Eagleson said Orr is starting to "wonder if it's all worth it" but for the time being he has decided to continue playing.

"We've been told there's no way he's going to become a cripple. If there was any suggestion that there would be permanent damage, Bobby would quit in five minutes."

Dr. John Palmer performed the orthoscopy at Toronto General Hospital, flushing some fragments of cartilage from the knee.

"Some pieces of lining have come loose and we have been able to flush them out," said Palmer. "We will have to continue those flushing processes, but we trust they will not be common.

"The knee now has only a certain number of miles left in it and it's up to him to decide how he's going to use those miles."

He said the left knee has already suffered such severe damage that "it will cause varying problems later on." He acknowledged there was a danger the knee — operated on five times — could become permanently stiff.

The doctor said Orr had been suffering considerable pain in recent weeks and that his knee had been "catching on him, locking on him, giving way — just not functioning at all."

He said if Orr decided to continue his career it was imperative that he reduce both the number of games and practice sessions.

Dr. Palmer said Orr's knee was "afflicted by "degenerative arthritis caused by injury" and differed from the more common spontaneous inflamation of joints suffered by many persons.

He said in the arthroscopy performed Tuesday a lighted instrument was inserted into the knee joint and revealed that fragments of cartilege had worn away from the lining of the bone.

"This reflects a degeneration of the bone in the knee," he said. "The knee has been worsening by the use of it in hockey. Playing will add to the wear and tear on the joint."

"I had thought at the time of the last arthroscopy, about six months ago, that there would be the possibility he could be able to play for a few years, but this now has to be modified," he said. The doctor could not say whether Orr would be able to play for even a year or two.

He said Orr was "concerned but optimistic" about the turn for the worse. He said Orr had been buoyed by his playing ability during the six-nation Canada Cup series and had looked forward to a good season.

"I don't think it matters much now if he plays because the deterioration is so advanced," Dr. Palmer said. "He's so anxious to play that he will if he's physically able."

The Hawks lured Orr away from Boston Bruins with a five-year contract said to be worth $3 million. He has given them their money's worth in games he's played, dominating the play.

MODENA, Italy (AP) — Former world champion driver Niki Lauda will stay with the Ferrari organization next season.

Wilson Shines In Penguin Win

By The Canadian Press

Pittsburgh Penguins didn't make any mistakes Tuesday night and the result was a convincing National Hockey League victory.

"Tonight we got off on top with two first-period goals and then we didn't make any mistakes the rest of the way," said Syl Apps after contributing two goals and an assist in a 7-1 triumph over Los Angeles Kings.

The Penguins, who had three losses and four ties in their previous seven games, were helped in their victory by strong goaltending by Dunc Wilson, a reject of Vancouver Canucks, Toronto Maple Leafs and most recently New York Rangers.

"When Wilson had to make saves, he stopped everything they could throw at him," said Pittsburgh coach Ken Schinkel. "He made several key saves in the first period which might have turned the game around had he been unable to handle them."

Rick Kehoe added two goals and an assist as the Penguins moved within seven points of the second-place Kings in the Norris Divison.

Pierre Larouche scored in the first 15 seconds and Pittsburgh dominated the game thereafter. The Penguins scored one short-handed goal and four power-play goals, the latter tying a team record.

Both Braves and Gulls will be missing three playersd during their next games because of the third-period fisticuffs. Brent Patterson, Wayne Larsen and Dan Stewart of Braves and Bill Kersch, Steve Saunders and Col Campbell of Gulls drew fighting majors and were assessed the automatic one-game suspensions.

A total of 130 minutes in penalties were handed out and a league spokesman said further action may be taken.

Saanich took a 3-2 lead going into the final period after the clubs battled to a 1-1 deadlock in the opening frame.

Jazz Trips Celts

By The Associated Press

The early results are in and it appears that New Orleans Jazz have established themselves as a candidate for the title of most improved team in the National Basketball Association.

Last season, the Jazz compiled a 38-44 record and finished fourth in the Central Division.

Tuesday night, New Orleans handed the defending champion Boston Celtics their first setback of the season, 115-97, before a crowd of 17,104 for its fourth victory in six games.

In Tuesday's other games, Milwaukee Bucks tipped Seattle SuperSonics 125-113, Golden State Warriors beat Detroit Pistons 111-98 and Portland Trail Blazers downed Atlanta Hawks 129-116.

Pete Maravich, who entered the game as the league's leading scorer with a 30.7 average, collected 43 points to lead the Jazz attack. He scored 26 points in the second half when New Orleans increased its 48-45 halftime edge.

IT'S A POTTY PROBLEM

SEATTLE (AP) — Kingdome management is confronting its first major design problem: a shortage of toilets.

Stadium director Ted Bowsfield said women complained about having only 15 restrooms to 17 for men. So two for men were converted for women in time for a recent National Football League game between the Seattle Seahawks and the Detroit Lions.

"It's sort of reverse discrimination now," Bowsfield admits. "But we had to do something for the women. They take a longer time in the restroom, you know."

He says four persons have been assigned to survey the toilet scene and report back after next week's game between Atlanta and Seattle.

In the meantime, Kingdome promotion director Johnny O'Brien proposed, "Let everyone go potty by alphabet. We'll announce over the loudspeakers that the A's can go, then the B's, and so on."

Money Keeps the Horses Going Round

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

At the track, it's nothing but money. That's why they make the horses run and that's what makes the wheels go around.

The matuel handle is the lifeblood of the operation and the saviour of the industry; and the dollar you start with in early afternoon travels a long road before the last race. After a few races, say five, there isn't much left of that original buck.

So take your average $2 bet. What happens to it?

The track takeout at Sandown is 19.1 per cent, which is a better break than racing patrons got here last year. In 1975, the mutuel take was 20.6 per cent.

Why the difference? Well, the figure is regulated by the amount of money handled and Sandown has moved up a grade since the season of '75.

At any rate, last year the provincial government took eight per cent, the association running the meeting grabbed 12 per cent and the federal government took .06 per cent. This year, the provincial government still gets its eight per cent, of which it gives back one per cent, as before, in a special B.C.-bred bonus; the association gets 10.5 per cent and the feds the same percentage.

Out of its share, the association keeps half for itself to cover operating costs and maybe turn a small profit. The other 5.25 per cent goes to the horsemen in purses money and why not? They put on the show that gets the people there in the first place.

Any "breakage" goes to the track, which also has other means of making a buck. That's where the concessions, programs, and "tea room" come in. All payoffs are figured to the nearest 10 cents and what's left over is change and falls in the "breakage" classification.

And if you're wondering what the provincial government take from Sandown last year was, that's easy. It was $225,107.92 and of the handle of $2,813,849.

But about that average $2 bet. It will be 38.2 cents less when you get it back in one form or another.

With that knocked off each time you reach into your wallet, you get the idea what racmoney that is being divvied ing is all about. It's your up.

And the horsemen don't get that much either, which is why they are after the provincial government to lower the take again. Check your handy racing form, if has all the answers. As a for-instance, the $900 purse in effect for most races, is broken down this way: $567 to the winner, $180 to second; $90 to third, $45 to fourth and $18 to fifth. Some bonus payments are made available later depending on the play.

Actually, the horsemen feel that a reduction in the provincial tax would be a boon to the government just as it was in 1972 after Premier W. A. C. Bennett lowered the takeout from 21.6 per cent to 18.1, which it is now at Vancouver.

Every betting record was broken during that 1972 season and each year since then as well. And in 1972 the government received 5.7 per cent more from its 8 per cent cut than from its 10.5 per cent take the previous year. The bettors just pumped the added money back into the machines.

But back to the horseman. After he gets his winnings, he must pay his trainer, who must pay his grooms, etc. Then the jockey gets his fee, or if he wins, his 10 per cent, and he must take care of his agent, his valet, his guild, et al. And then there are all those other expenses. The list is long.

But it's only money.

Now Randy Wants a Raise

RANDY JONES
. . . Cy Young winner

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Randy Jones says now that he's won the Cy Young award, he ought to be tht highest-paid member of San Diego Padres and intends to bargain for a three-year contract with the National League baseball team.

"It's like a boyhood dream come true," Jones, 26, told a news confertnce shortly after learning he was the winner of baseball's highest award for a pitcher.

"I felt all along that I would win, but I thought it would be very close," said the left-handed hurlef who received 15 of the 24 first-place votes in this year's balloting.

Jones, who won 22 games for the Padres this season, narrowly lost the Cy Young award to Tom Seaver last year.

"Last year, I knew I had to beat Tom Seaver," he said. "This year, I felt they (other candidates) had to beat Randy Jones."

Jones was named somewhere on all 24 ballots cast by a committee composed of two baseball writers from each of the 12 National League cities. Six second-place votes and three for third gave him a total of 96 points.

That easily outdistanced runner-up Jerry Koosman of the Mets, who drew seven first-place votes. Mets teammate Jon Matlack and Don Sutton of Los Angeles Dodgers received one first-place vote apiece.

Jones, a five-foot-11, 180-pounder currently recovering from off-season arm surgery which threatens his career, also received six second-place votes and three third-place votes in the election.

From 1956 through 1966 the award was made to one pitcher from either the American or National league.

He was the only one mentioned on each ballot, collecting 96 points: Koosman, a left-hander, had 69½ points with Sutton third at 25½.

Balloting by the BBWAA was on a points system with five for first place, three for second and one for third.

Left-hander Steve Carlton of the NL East Division champion Philadelphia Phillies received 11 points; Rawly Eastwick, reliever for the world champion Cincinnati Reds got six points; southpaw Matlack got five, J. R. Richard of Houston Astros had two points and Seaver got one point. Four of the eight pitchers to receive points were left-handers.

Jones sprinted to 16 triumphs in his first 19 decisions but fell sharply after the all-star break to finish at 22-14. Koosman charged at the end to bring his record to 21-10, his first 20-victory season. Sutton also finished with 21 triumphs in his first 20-victory season.

"I couldn't make a muscle," Jones recalled Tuesday, reflecting on his 6-11 finish. "The doctor said the nerve had been fatigued to the point that it wasn't working. Everything I had worked for the last two years could have gone up in smoke."

There was a possibility that tendons from his right arm would have to be transplanted to his left — a procedure similar to the one survived by the Dodgers' Tommy John.

Fortunately for Jones, that didn't prove necessary.

B.C. Government Tardy On Three Key Decisions

Some rambling notes along the trail:

British Columbia's government has made a number of apparently hasty decisions since coming to power . . . Unfortunately, this speed hasn't been evident in three matters of grave concern to environmentalists . . . The fate of the Tsitika-Schoen area still has to be decided but little action has been taken since it was put on the Environment and Land Use Committee agenda . . . Nearly a year has passed since Dr. Peter Pearse held his hearings throughout B.C. as the one-man Royal Commission on Forest Resources . . . Pearse's findings have been handed to the minister and there seems to be some delay in printing the formal versions of the report . . . But, considering the impact this report might have on our main resource, it should have been given some priority . . . And, there's still the unfinished business over the West Coast Trail and Nitinat Triangle additions to Pacific Rim National Park . . . The province still hasn't turned the lands over to the federal government . . . How about a little action on all three matters?

Something else to ponder . . . California recently passed a comprehensive coastal zone management law designed to protect its coastline from over-development . . . Our own approach to this vital matter has been a hodge-podge involving many levels of government — sometimes working at odds with each other . . . The California bill establishes a state Coastal Zone Conservation Commission with six regional commissions involving citizens and local government officials . . . The commissions will have the power of veto over all development schemes and the policies established by these agencies will apply to coastal zones extending 1,000 yards inland and to certain inland intrusions such as estuaries, wetlands or natural development areas which extend back to mountain ridges.

Thistles End 'Runners Reign

Mt. Douglas Thistles crushed Reynolds' hopes of retaining the Times Trophy by upsetting the Roadrunners 3-2 Tuesday in a Division I match in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

Defeat left Roadrunners, who have won the league title for four straight years, in a tie with Oak Bay Bays. But the Bays have a game remaining and even if they lose against Victoria High Tyees on Friday and finish up in a tie for first with Reynolds, the Oak Bay club would take the B.C. championship berth by having allowed fewer goals.

In the other Division I game, Tyees kept alive in a bid for a spot in the Colonist Cup playoff semi-finals by nudging Spectrum, 2-1.

All the scoring came in the first half of the lone Division II match as Claremont Spartans edged Parkland Panthers, 3-2.

Destruction Near for A's

NEW YORK (AP) — Oakland A's, winners of consecutive world championships in 1972, 1973 and 1974 and five straight American League West Division titles from 1971-1975, are about to self-destruct.

The process will take place Friday when 24 players who won free-agent status by playing the 1976 season without signed contracts will be selected in baseball's first re-entry draft.

Eight of them come from Oakland, and six of those eight—catcher Gene Tenace, outfielders Joe Rudi and Don Baylor, infielders Sal Bando and Bert Campaneris; and relief pitcher Rollie Fingers—form the heart and soul of the A's. All are expected to be chosen early and often in the draft.

Baltimore will make four contributions to the draft pool and three of them—slugging outfielder Reggie Jackson, second baseman Bobby Grich and 20-game winner Wayne Garland—are among the top names.

Also up for grabs are the opposing starting pitchers in the opening game of the 1976 World Series—Don Gullett of Cincinnati Reds and Doyle Alexander of New York Yankees.

Each player may be drafted by 12 teams. His old team then would join that dozen to negotiate with him.

The re-entry draft will last a maximum of 12 rounds. Then National League clubs will begin pursuit of the free agent picks. Meanwhile, the American League teams will spend another day in town, conducting the expansion draft to stock the new Toronto and Seattle franchises.

The expansion draft will supply each of the new teams with 30 players, each carrying a price tag of $175,000. That's considerably less than the free agents will cost, but the talent available in this draft is not as awesome as the re-entry superstars.

Each of the 12 AL teams has been allowed to protect 15 players from Seattle and Toronto. The balance of their 40-man rosters plus most minor leaguers under control of the major league teams are eligible.

The exceptions are minor leaguers who signed their first professional contracts in either 1975 or 1976.

REG MIDGLEY

BARRY RANKIN

Beset by bad weather many even cancellations, poor economy and high ferry fees this past season, Western Speedway officials suffered another blow Tuesday night when manager Reg Midgley and assistant manager Barry Rankin both tendered their resignations.

Midgley has been associated with the Speedway since 1957 and has been directly concerned with its operation since 1966.

Rankin, who has been associated with the sport and the Speedway for about 15 years has been Midgley's aid since 1967, was offered Midgley's positon, but declined due to pressure of business.

Rankin now is working full time in Midgley's auto firm and said he would not have the time necessary to operate the Speedway.

"It takes six or seven days and three nights a week," said Rankin.

Midgley and Rankin have not completely dissociated themselves from autosport, however. Midgley will continue to remain as controller for the International Drivers Challenge Series and a director of the Speedway.

Both said they will assist wherever possible and retain their memberships in the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association.

In his letter of retirement, Midgley said he felt the Speedway could rebound from its poor seasonin 1976, and suggested that VITRA make every effort to have an Island circuit in both super-stocks and hobby-stock division.

Fifteen of the scheduled 30 main events were either rained out or threatened by weather to the extent that the crowd totals this past summer dropped considerably from previous seasons.

The increase in ferry rates also hit visiting drivers hard and the retirement of several popular drivers contributed to the problems.

BUCS RALLY TO WIN

Western Homes Buckaroos hammered in five goals during the second period en route to an 8-6 victory over Maple Leafs in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Leafs led 3-0 in the first period.

Randy Krantz led the Buckaroos with two goals and three assists while other two-goal efforts came from Bob Nicholson and Rick Piechota. Garth Cunningham and Dave Pettinger contributed singles.

Al Decker and Kerry Brewster each scored twice for Leafs and singles were added by Brent Davis and Murray Kennett, a former defenceman with Edmonton Oilers of the World Hockey Association and Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada League.

Provincial Field Hockey Tourney Draws 20 Teams

Spectrum, Oak Bay, Mt. Douglas and Norfolk House will represent Greater Victoria in the British Columbia high school girls' field hockey championship tournament Thursday through Saturday at Lansdowne Junior High School.

The 20-team tournament opens with round-robin play in four divisions with the top two teams from each division advancing to the playoffs.

Spectrum, which edged Oak Bay 1-0 to take the Greater Victoria crown, includes high-scoring Pam Kozak in the line-up. Miss Kozak fired 26 goals last season to top the league.

Oak Bay, the reigning provincial champion, and Mt. Douglas had the best defensive records in league play and were unbeaten during the regular season. With the exception of the 1-0 championship final, all other Greater Victoria playoffs were decided in overtime.

Mt. Douglas allowed only one goal in league play and finished one point ahead of Oak Bay, which allowed only four goals in 11 matches. Spectrum was the highest-scoring team with 45 goals.

Norfolk House is led by Nina Bland, the scoring leader last season and top playoff scorer this season.

Caponi in Front By Three Strokes

MINO, Japan (AP) — Donna Caponi Young of the United States fired a three-under-par 71 Tuesday and took a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association Mizuno Classic.

The round gave the 31-year-old Young a three-under-par 145 for 36 holes over the 6,925-yard, par-74 Hanayashiki Golf Club course in western Japan.

First-round leader Beth Stone of the U.S., shooting a three-over-par 77, slipped to second place with a 148 total. Japan's top woman pro, Hisako "Chako" Higuchi, was third at 149 after a second-round 77.

In fourth place was Japan's Noriko Kobayashi with a 150 total. Tied for fifth at 151 were Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., now living in Florida, Sally Little of Ireland, Pat Bradley of the United States and Michiko Okada of Japan. Post shot a second-round 73 to go with her first-round 78, Little and Bradley had 74s and Okada a 78.

Defending champion Shelly Hamlin of the United States was in a 26th-place tie at 156.

World Puck Series in '77

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson said Tuesday that an eight-game series between the Stanley Cup champions and the European champions is in the works for November and December of 1977.

Eagleson, named Monday as Hockey Canada's chief negotiator for the next four years, said that discussions on the series with the European hockey nations were at "an interesting stage." Eagleson and National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell will travel to Europe either late this month or in early December to resume the negotiations.

The series, with four games in Canada and four games in Europe, is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 20 to Dec. 10, 1977.

Eagleson said that he and Campbell have discussed a formula which would allow the 1976-77 Stanley Cup champions to play only 72 games in an 80-game schedule in the 1977-78 season, thus accommodating their participation in the series.

"The champions would play a 72-game schedule, after which bonus points would be added onto their 72-game point total on a percentage basis," he said.

Eagleson also said that he is negotiating a similar January-February, 1978, series between the champions of the World Hockey Association and the European runners-up.

The Canada Cup series, the first of which was played in September, will not be renewed until 1980, he said.

Eagleson warned Canadians that an overabundance of international hockey will be harmful to the game on the home front and, indeed, could destroy it.

"We have to be very careful not to destroy the amateur and professional leagues in North America by having too many international games," he said. "As an example of overkill, there will be more than 35 games in North America between Dec. 5, 1976, and Jan. 10, 1977, which involve Soviet and Czechoslovakian teams. This is too much international competition during that short period of time."

He said that the NHL has turned down proposals by the Soviets and the Czechoslovakians for tours of NHL cities this season.

Another Cup Bid By Aussie Yacht

SYDNEY (AP) — Gretel II, the Australian yacht that lost in a controversial sailing series for the America's Cup in 1970, has been officially accepted as an entry for the 1977 series.

W. H. Northam, head of a newly-formed syndicate backing the entry, has confirmed the challenge by Gretel II, which is now being remodelled.

Eagleson Denies Campbell Claim

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Eagleson, chairman of Canada Cup 1976, said Tuesday that he is flabbergasted over statements made by Clarence Campbell which labelled the Canada Cup "a waste."

The president of the National Hockey League was quoted last week in Montreal to the effect that the Canada Cup drained the community by taking millions out of peoples' pockets to pay overseas teams to come here, and very little of the money ever finds its way back into hockey in North America.

"That is a ridiculous statement and is no reflection of the fact," Eagleson said.

He claimed that the net receipts from the September tournament will be more than $2.2 million, of which 50 per cent goes to amateur hockey in Canada and the other 50 per cent goes to the pension funds of the National Hockey League and World Hockey Association.

In addition, Eagleson said, the Montreal Forum received in excess of $400,000 for arena rentals and Maple Leaf Gardens was paid in excess of $250,000.

He pointed out that the only money that went out of North America was contained in the prize money paid to the European teams, approximately $250,000.

"Mr. Campbell is absolutely wrong when he suggests that we take money out of the community," he said. "The net results of the Canada Cup was that it brought millions of dollars into community businesses."

ALDERMAN BACKS BUS FARE HIKE

McKenzie called the Chamber of Commerce "socialist" for opposing the 10-cent increase.

"I think it's a sad state of affairs for the chamber to consider such action," McKenzie said.

The chamber noted that by raising the bus fare from 25 to 35 cents, Hydro had exceeded federal anti-inflation guidelines.

McKenzie's comments came at a meeting of the central business district advisory committee, where he was told the chamber had passed a motion protesting the fare hike.

Hydro's action was justified by rising costs, McKenzie said.

Chamber director Alan Emery said although society as a whole is supposed to be directed by Anti-Inflation Board rulings, "Crown corporations are permitted to come up with a 40 per cent increase."

Federal and provincial governments had agreed to country-wide application of the inflation-fighting legislation, "yet the (provincial) government goes on its merry way disregarding those guide lines," Emery said.

He called it a "carte blanch credit card approach by government," which civic leaders and chambers of commerce cannot ignore. Government also is losing credibility by its approach, he said.

Central business district delegates supported the chamber view and passed a resolution saying the Hydro bus fare increase is not justified.

Victoria aldermen Tuesday supported preserving the former Crystal Garden as an arboretum for which the city would be willing to provide $500,000.

They agreed in an informal caucus to go on record as favoring restoration and to seek additional support from the Capital Improvement District Commission.

Mayor Mike Young said developments other than waterfront improvements appear to be within the orbit of CIDC.

Ald. Bob Wright said there is an "obvious advantage" in the proposal in as much as the CIDC is a responsibility of Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, a former alderman who proposed the redevelopment of Crystal Garden two years ago.

Ald. Bob Ellis wondered about the ongoing cost of maintaining the garden, but Young and Wright agreed the facility would be attractive to a private operator once capital costs are covered.

The only dissident voice was that of Ald. Ron McKenzie, who said a convention centre is needed in Victoria before a botanical garden.

Cablevision Hearing Postponed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Televison and Telecommunications Commission announced Tuesday the postponement to Jan. 25 of hearings on the ownership transfer of major shares from Premier Cablevision to Rogers Telecommunications.

The announcement came after the Vancouver Community Television Association sent a telegram to the CRTC requesting more time for intervention at the transfer hearings which had been scheduled for next Monday in Vancouver.

"It renews my faith in the CRTC," associaton co-ordinator Gloria Kieler said Tuesday. "The 14 days notice originally given to respond to the hearings was really ridiculous."

Miss Kieler said the postponement will give community groups time to organize representaive and fully endorsed interventions.

"Personally I don't think transfer of ownership to an eastern firm is a good idea because the further way the head office, the more difficult it will be to influence programming," she said.

Marijuana Seized

SAN SIMEON, Calif. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies arrested 14 men Monday and confiscated about five tons of a concentrated form of marijuana valued at more than $30 million. Four of the men were arrested after a four-hour chase by a coast guard cutter, during which the men may have dumped some marijuana from their boat.

No Fight on Smaller Classes

Spending more money to hold down the size of classes is the one thing taxpayers are willing to pay for, Walt Kitley, president of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, said Tuesday.

He was commenting on School District 61 plans to cut 12 more teaching positions next year, a move Kitley said will surely lead to larger classes.

Kitley said studies and polls all across North America have shown taxpayers don't object to shelling out more to maintain smaller classes.

In an effort to stay within a $42 million budget, the school board is considering cutting 12 more teaching positions next fall at a saving of about $92,000 between September and Dec. 31.

Kitley also criticized recent comments by Trustee Peter Bunn that militant leadership in teachers' unions has led to awards.

It can be easily documented, Kitley said, that teachers' contracts are consistently a year behind settlements in the industrial sector.

Because fringe benefits are not subject to arbitration, and teachers have been settling contracts by compulsory arbitration for a number of years, teachers have fallen way behind in this area, he said.

In fact, all other union employees of the school district have better fringe benefits than teachers, Kitley said.

WCB Secretary Fired Over Policy Disagreement

VANCOUVER (CP) — Connie Sun, secretary to the Workers' Compensation Board, has been fired from her $24,000-a-year job, following a disagreement over WCB policy since the Social Credit government took over.

Miss Sun said Tuesday she was dismissed on Friday by acting board chairman John Berry and commissioners Terry Watt and George Kowbel after Berry turned down her offer to resign.

The 27-year-old lawyer said she had been hired by former WCB chairman Terence Ison 14 months ago to give advice on legal matters and to communicate board decisions to claimants.

But since Ison was fired last January by Labor Minister Allan Williams, she said her advice has been consistently ignored and she has been forced to send out WCB decisions of "questionable legality."

The main problem, Miss Sun said in an interview, has been the increasing tendency of Berry, Watt and Kowbel to overturn decisions of the independent boards of review.

The boards of review were one of the main foundations of the revamping of the WCB that took place under the former NDP government.

They were established, with permanent board members, to ensure that original decisions made by WCB claims adjudicators were reviewed by independent bodies.

Miss Sun said Ison rarely overturned rulings by the boards of review — a power he had under provincial legislation — and only in instances where there was a probable error of law.

That situation has changed drastically since Ison's departure, she said.

Her comments follow a statement Sunday by Bill King, labor minister under the former NDP government, who said the boards of review are being "neutered" by the WCB.

Miss Sun said the commissioners often overturn boards of review decisions on the basis of the weighing of evidence, a practice unheard of while Ison was chairman, and sometimes they have not had the transcripts of the board of review hearings.

Soft Markets Closing Mills

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel announced Monday it will shut down five of its mills briefly next month because of soft markets and high newsprint inventories.

A company spokesman said the shutdowns will allow MacMillan Bloedel to adjust its inventories. He said soft markets for pulp, paper and line board, together with high inventories held by customers, have caused the shutdowns.

Alberni pulp and paper division, Powell River division and Harmac pulp and paper division plants in British Columbia will be shut down from Dec. 22 to Jan. 3, 1977.

However, about 30 men a day will be employed at the Harmac mill in Nanaimo during the shutdown.

The Nanaimo mill will employ the men on tasks such as maintenance, security and keeping the steam plant in operation.

However, the balance of the staff, numbering close to 1,200 men, will have an extended vacation without pay.

Also affected are two plants outside B.C. The MacMillan Rothesay newsprint plant at Saint John, N.B., will be closed from Dec. 22 to Jan. 3.

Washington Post

ROME — Italian firms hiring recent high school or college graduates will receive special financial incentives under a new government plan to cut the socially explosive degree of unemployment among those young people seeking their first jobs.

Despite a continuing and serious recession, Italy's official statistics list only 850,000 persons currently unemployed. But both government and private-sector economists agree that the brunt of the recession has fallen on the young.

According to official projections — which in Italy are generally low — within three or four years, there could be as many as two million unemployed young people with secondary school diplomas or college degrees.

The government's new proposal, announced by Tina Anselmi, the minister of labor and the only woman in the Cabinet, would allocate close to $500 million to provide work and training for up to 420,000 young people a year.

Presented after extensive talks with Italian business leaders and representatives of the powerful CGIL-CISL-UIL trade union federation, the new plan would involve the public sector as well as private industry.

The government's draft bill, which will be debated in parliament later this year, will use incentives to businesses to encourage the employment of 300,000 young people between the ages of 15 and 22, or 28 in the case of college graduates.

Northern firms, which will be allowed to hire two youngsters for every 30 employees, will receive $40 a month from the state for every person hired under the new program. In the south, where the problem is even more acute, the proportion will be greater.

Three young employees will be allowed for every 20 normally hired, and firms will receive a monthly state contribution of $80. The payments will be made for periods ranging from 18 months in the north to two years in the south.

The young unemployed, who will have to register on special state employment rolls, will be hired for 12-month periods that may be doubled in the case of those with special skills. The unskilled will have shorter working hours and will be required to follow special training courses expected to lead to regular jobs.

The plan also provides for civil service employment for an additional 120,000 young persons who would be given normal salaries and contracts running from four months to two years for work in understaffed government departments such as libraries, museums, archives and registry offices. Another provision reserves 25 per cent of all civil service jobs in the next three years for persons falling into the young-unemployed category.

Economists, sociologists and educational experts agree that the present situation has been created only in part by the recession, which has forced firms to combat rising labor costs by blocking employee turnover.

They say another cause is a total lack of planning in the education field that has allowed thousands of students to pursue studies in fields such as accounting, medicine and law that already are highly oversupplied.

The new plan, therefore, would use temporary employment and retraining to drain current labor excess.

Queried about their reactions, several business representatives pointed out that the future employment of young graduates cannot be guaranteed.

Those questioned added that they were particularly worried about the limited-term contracts which in Italy have been used in the courts by employee's seeking full-time jobs. "One of the reasons firms are hesitant to hire is that in Italy, it is easier to divorce a wife than fire a worker," a top Milan industrialist told the city's prestigious daily, Corriere Della Sera.

Music Lessons Painless

NEW YORK (AP)— Children loved music — until they begin taking music lessons. Then the instrument they enjoyed plunking out odd notes on suddenly becomes a symbol of frustration, says Madleine Carabo Cone, who has transformed the pain and misery of musical theory into fun.

Her students hop, skip and jump their way into the fundamentals of music. They use hundreds of games and even sip their juice in rhythm.

"Music is difficult to learn," says Miss Carabo-Cone, a professional violinist as well as a music teacher. "The problem is getting it down to an accessible level and making it easy to grasp—to be able to hold it in your hand."

Her students do just that. The floors, walls, tables and even Miss Carabo-Cone herself all say music.

She uses the "Grand Staff" as the basis for her teachings. It consists of 10 lines with the bass clef taking up one side and the treble clef on the other half. Pointing to the huge staff on her studio floor, Miss CaraboCone says she divides it into "upper and lower playgrounds."

All of these elements work together to make learning music practically involuntary, says Miss Carabo-Cone:

"The child absorbs it naturally. He's always becoming something—a line, a note, a beat. By walking, talking and even sipping juice in time with the music, the child can identify with the notes, time values and sequence of the music."

She aims at "continually stimulating the child's mind—and music is really just one part of it." Her classes of four-to-eight-year-olds also discover the alphabet and strengthen their reasoning skills by relating to the shapes, positions and sounds of the Grand Staff.

Miss Carabo-Cone explains that she came up with the basis for the method when she was about five years old.

"As a child, I used to get nervous when preparing for violin concerts. I had to memorize the piece and always wished I could have the music in front of me. One day, I put ribbons on the floor in lines and began jumping from line to line relating each note to the next. And it worked."

She developed the method several years later and has been teaching it in her studio

Psychologists and educators have studied her system and have applied it to many other areas of learning, she says.

The teacher notes that she believes in "creating a foundation to build upon. People take so much for granted and assume a person knows certain things. This is a mistake. I want my students to know exactly what a line is, what a space is."

Because her method emphasizes the child's native abilities, she says it has been particularly helpful in teaching disadvantaged children.

For some 10 years, Miss Carabo-Cone visited poor areas around New York instructing teachers in her method. She now spends most of her time travelling around the country conducting teacher training workshops.

"I feel that a child can't learn an instrument and theory together—it's too much to absorb at once. He needs a foundation of note recognition and time values before he can pick up an instrument and play," she says.

Kornelia Ender Is a Star Who Hasn't Got a Fan Club

Her value to the state is not as a teen-age heroine but as a factory-proven product designed almost exclusively for the export market.

The average East German has no idea how this fabulous 17-year-old lives, where she trains, what national resources were harnessed to pluck her out of a neighborhood swimming pool in Halle a decade ago and set her on a computerized course to Olympic gold.

The comrade knows that his country won 40 gold medals at the Montreal Olympics, second only to the Soviet Union and six more than the United States, and that Ender won four gold medals and a silver. But he feels no personal identification with her.

Ender and her team-mates are walled off from the public in a world of goals and graphs and special diets, of trainers with stopwatches and heavy "performance bibles," of white-coated doctors taking blood tests and injecting hormones, of training camps in the Bulgarian mountains, a computer in Leipzig and a committee of high commissars in Berlin.

Privilege dwells here: a bigger apartment, a higher place on the waiting list to buy a car, a better job for father, an assured place at the university, vacations in another bloc country and sometimes for a fine performance, an envelope full of marks that no one will admit ever existed.

Occasionally Westerners are given a guarded glimpse of the sports university at Leipzig, some of the 691 gym centres or 890 track and field complexes, the new pool at Rostow or the sports club at Kark Marx Stadt, but always on a carefully guided tour that divulges no secrets.

But secrets will out. It is known now how East Germany, with a population of 17.5 million, managed to send 292 athletes to Montreal and have 159 of them return wearing medals.

"It was clear in 1973 when I took blood samples from her ear lobes that Kornelia Ender could swim the 100-metre freestyle in 56 seconds flat," said Alois Marder, a sports doctor who defected to the West two years ago.

"By monitoring her performance charts and her metabolism it was determined what she was capable of achieving and how much training she needed."

For 10 years Marder was chief of research into high-performance athletes at the Chemie Sports Club in Halle, where Ender was developed.

The Chemie Club is one of 18 sports clubs that serve as laboratories for the new breed of alchemists bubbling up Olympic gold. They concentrate on high performance athletes attending sports schools at both elementary and high school level.

Each specializes in certain sports: rowing and weightlifting at one, skiing and figure skating at another. Children are selected at age 9 or 10 after they have been watched for two years at a local sports centre or have distinguished themselves at youth competitions.

They board at the sports school. Sometimes the whole family of an exceptional prospect is moved to an apartment near the club and the father is given a job, usually better than the one he had.

Ender was sent to the Chemie Club at age 8, after she had been swimming for three years. When Marder was there Chemie had a staff of 70 including 11 doctors, and for its 450 swimmers, eight trainers. His medical speciality was researching the effects of hard training on bodily functions.

"If only three or four are world-class swimmers, why bother to train the other 147?" Marder asks, then answers his own question.

"Because statistics have determined that you need to train at least 100 top swimmers to get one or two of world class."

At the schools swimmers turn up at the pool at 8:30, train for 2½ hours, attend class for two, break for lunch, return to class for three hours and go back to the pool for another two-hour session.

The training programs are devised by the "scientific centre for swim" at Leipzig University. Experiences with high-performance athletes and data from blood samples fed into a computer.

Every cough, cramp and kink is duly reported. Graphs and charts tell the athlete what he has to achieve.

At two-year intervals, training programs are overhauled on the basis of the data and a new "performance bible" is issued. It dictates every detail of the care and feeding of future medal winners.

At Montreal, one of the East German girls revealed that the training bible requires 10-year-olds to swim a minimum of 800 kilometres (500 miles) a year.

"Each child is given a minimum and maximum goal," Marder explained. "If at the end of the year, he or she is not inside the figures the option is given of staying on for another year or going home.

"A swimmer who rows too fast or gets too heavy may be switched to another sport, like rowing. If a child reaches full growth and does not meet performance levels, the decision is automatic."

At the Chemie Sports Club the future medallists dine on steaks, oranges, eggs and other items not always seen in the markets of Halle. "Three years ago it was difficult to meet the menu standards," Marder recalls. "Bananas were always hard to come by, and sometimes eggs. But the clubs always had a priority."

Until 1972 the sexes were rigidly separated at the training camps and schools. Now boys and girls train together.

Sex relations used to be strictly forbidden for athletes under 19, but now "partner relations" are allowed and sometimes even "steered" by the commissars. Ender, at 17, is engaged to 25-year-old Roland Matthes, a world-class backstroker.

At 14 or 15, the athlete destined for gold first encounters the most controversial part of the system. Where needed, doctors administer steroids, sex hormones, daily for four to five weeks to build up arm and back muscles.

Introduced in the United States, steroids have been used for years by several Olympic teams.

Adolf Metzner, a West German sports doctor who specializes in the problems and detection of doped athletes, has no doubt that male hormones helped East German girls win gold medals in 11 or 13 swimming events and nine of 14 track and field events at Montreal.

"Anyone who watched on TV was shocked by the sight of those enormous muscle-bound women with huge shoulders and arms that a furniture mover would be proud of. Weightlifting alone would never account for such massive back development."

East German officials at Montreal denied that biochemistry was involved. A Canadian broadcaster who asked a trainer about the deep voices emanating from some of the strapping water sprites was told: "They have come here to swim, not to sing; why do you concern yourself with their voices?"

Many sports officials see the advent of steroids stabilizers and the most devious development in the alchemist's art.

"The greatest danger to the games today is the manipulation of athletes with biochemistry," said Willi Daume, head of the West German Olympic Committee.

Marder is certain that steroids were widely used at Montreal.

"Few shot putters can reach 19 metres (62.3 feet) without steroids, and I am 100-per-cent convinced it is not possible to exceed 21 metres without them," he said. In this summer's Olympics the winning toss was 21.05 metres.

Side-effects among girls include deepening of the voice, flattening of the chest skin changes and sometimes, among non-Caucasian women, hair growth on the chest. There may also be such delayed psychological effects as pronounced lesbian tendencies.

"Long-range effects are to be expected when the side-effects are disregarded," said Marder, "but generally within two years after the injections have ceased the muscles diminish and the body returns to more feminine proportions."

Nobody Greets McCarthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eugene McCarthy, an independent presidential candidate who campaigned against the two-party system and said he didn't care whether he became a spoiler for one of the major party nominees, found no hero's welcome here.

As he stepped from the plane at the airport here, he was nearly unnoticed, a lone figure uncheered by crowds of well-wishers, met only by a handful of reporters.

The independent candidate had nothing to say to the reporters. They were waiting to tell him he had been no great spoiler, that he had created little voter enthusiasm, that he had chalked up no grand tally in any state.

McCarthy, a folk hero of the young in 1968, the man whose opposition to the Vietnam war marked the beginning of the end of the conflict and signalled to Lyndon Johnson that he had only an uphill battle in seeking re-election or even renomination by his own party, told reporters that he was going home.

He brushed off their questions, perfunctory queries designed for a loser who has lost in trumps.

"Not tonight," he said. "I'm going home."

He made his way to a waiting car, indicating he did not know the outcome of the election and that he did not really want to know. They had told him all along that the best he could hope to do was siphon votes from Jimmy Carter and strengthen Gerald Ford. He kept saying he didn't care.

The maverick Democrat was on the ballot in 29 states and a write-in candidate in five others and the District Columbia.

McCarthy . . . no hero's welcome

ALASKA CAPITAL TO MOVE

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Alaskans voted Tuesday to build the new state capital at Willow, a site close to Anchorage and the least expensive to develop.

Alaska voters shouted a loud no to an initiative to repeal the state's limited entry fishing law.

Observers had predicted Willow would win because of strong support from Anchorage, where more than 50 per cent of the state's population resides.

But residents of the state's present capital at Juneau made a last-ditch effort in support of Larson Lake, hoping to unite with Fairbanks supporters of the site closest to that interior city.

Six States Veto N-Plant Curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Voters in six states turned back attempts to restrict nuclear power plants; Massachusetts said no to controls on handguns; but New Jersey voted to make Atlantic City the "Las Vegas of the East."

Those were some of the results Tuesday in state ballot propositions with national implications.

In Massachusetts, voters turned down by a 3-to-1 margin a proposal to ban the sale of handguns. It was the first measure of its kind ever to go on a state ballot.

New Jersey, where two years ago voters turned down a measure to allow casino gambling if communities wanted it, voted to allow it in Atlantic City, the decaying coast resort. Civic leaders there had been seeking the go-ahead for years in an effort to make the city into a gambling centre.

But Delaware, adjoining New Jersey to the south, rejected a proposition that would have permitted slot-machine gambling. The state has had betting this fall on professional football with less financial success than expected.

The rejection of proposals to control nuclear development by imposing strict safety standards on any atomic plants followed the failure of a similar proposal in California last spring.

There were also proposals on several state ballots to ban throwaway beverage bottles and cans.

In Michigan, a throwaway ban passed by nearly 2 to 1. In Maine, it won by about 3 to 2. In Colorado, it was defeated about 2 to 1.

Jimmy Carter: From Rejection to the Top

By JULES WITCOVER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Ironically, Jimmy Carter's unprecedentedly long and successful journey to the White House began in rejection more than four years ago, when he sought to become George McGovern's running mate on a Democratic ticket he fully expected would lose.

Two Carter aides, campaign manager Hamilton Jordan and advertising specialist Gerald Rafshoon, lobbied fruitlessly at the 1972 Democratic convention to get McGovern to choose Carter in what was preposterous naivete, considering Carter had been a leader in the stop-McGovern effort.

They, and Carter, thought the national publicity Carter would get, even in a losing cause, would provide him with a launching pad for a presidential bid in 1976. Sen. Edmund Muskie, after all, had parlayed his unsuccessful but popular vice-presideential candidacy in 1968 into th position as the early front-runner for the 1972 presidential nomination.

The Same Thought

Rejected out of hand, Jordan, Rafshoon and other early Carter associates held a series of meetings and then proposed to Carter at the governor's mansion in Atlanta, even before McGovern's defeat, that he seek the presidency on his own in 1976. They found on making the suggestion that the ambitious Carter was already thinking the same way.

Intimidated by their own audacity, the Carter group gingerly danced around the prospect, referring to the objective themselves by such euphemisms as "a national effort" in Carter's behalf. In a remarkably prescient memorandum from Jordan to Carter in late 1972 written in those terms, a blueprint for a Carter campaign for the presidency was laid out.

It proceeded on the twin premise that Alabama's Gov. George Wallace and Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts both would be seeking the Democratic nomination. Carter would have to dispose of each of them in the political arena to be nominated.

Vote Diluted

The race did not work out precisely that way, because in September of 1974 Kennedy voluntarily took himself out of contention. His withdrawal precipitated a flood of liberal candidates for the nomination, a circumstance that hopelessly diluted the liberal vote and paved the wasy for Carter's middle-road bid for the party nomination.

Liberals of all shadings poured out of the political woodwork — Rep. Morris Udall, Sen. Birch Bayh, former governor Terry Sanford, former senator Fred Harris, Gov. Milbon J. Shapp, former ambassador Sargent Shriver. They plunged into an elimination contest for the "liberal mantle" and in their preoccupation, permitted Carter to seize the central ground, and some of the right as well.

In addition to Wallace on the far right, two middle-road Democrats also competed — Senators Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Henry (Scoop) Jackson of Washington. But Bentsen was formidable only in his own imagination and Jackson never caught the public's imagination. He toiled in the shadow of Sen. Hubert Humphrey as the darling of the old-line Democrats and organized labor, and never could shake the image they imposed on him as Humphrey's stand-in.

All through 1975, while the Liberals were shadow-boxing with each other, Carter was working the country like a precinct captain. In 1973, when Democratic national chairman Robert Strauss called on him one day at the governor's mansion, Carter had volunteered as a lame-duck governor (one consecutive term is the limit in Georgia to help elect a larger Democratic congress in 1974.

Key to the Store

Strauss gave Carter the assignment, not realizing at the time it was like giving a kid a key to a candy store. Carter, with Jordan as his assistant based in Washington and press secretary Jody Powell as his travelling ally, hit the road with a vengeance — and a purpose beyond merely electing Democratic congressmen.

They deftly offered not only Gov. Carter's celebrity, which was virtually nil outside Georgia, but his energy, diligence and dedication. He and Powell took great care not to give the impression that they were touring the country for any reason other than to help the party. But Carter was picking up political I.O.U.s and identifying future campaign recruits with every chicken-and-peas dinner.

By the time of the party's mini-convention in December, 1974, Carter already was on the verge of formally declaring his candidacy.

Quiet Evangelism

From the very start, Carter fuelled his effort with a dulcet moral tone, a quiet evangelism borrowed straight from the Sunday morning Bible class he taught to middle-aged and older men in the Plains First Baptist Church, where he was, and still is, a deacon.

His message was relatively uncomplicated: that the country had somehow lost its way in the course of a series of domestic and foreign misadventures, most of them resulting from a failure of the government to adopt for itself the same moral principles by which its people sought to live.

While the liberals, mired in uncertainty and indecision, jockeyed for position among themselves, and while Wallace and Jackson concentrated throughout 1975 on raising money for the 1976 campaign, Carter and his whole family spread out, beating the bushes for campaign workers, building a tight network of support, especially in the early caucus and primary states.

Iowa was to take the first step toward selecting its convention delegates in the third week of 1976, more than a month before the first primary in New Hampshire.

Carter 'Won' Poll

In the summer, a young recruit from New Mexico named Tim Kraft (later national co-ordinator for all Carter state organizations in the fall campaign) was sent to Iowa to prepare for the January caucus. When a sort of dry-run for the precinct-level caucuses was called by the Iowa Democratic chairman, Kraft got his troops out and a straw poll showed him to have more support than any other candidate. Shortly afterward, the Des Moines papers took a "poll" at a big statewide dinner in Ames at which most of the candidates including Carter, spoke. Kraft again mobilized the Carter forces and "won" the poll of dinner guests.

That result, seized by the press and TV, propelled Carter into the national consciousness to a degree not even the prescient Jordan had expected.

Carter lost the next precinct caucus, in Mississippi, to Wallace, then bounced back with a thin victory over Harris in Oklahoma and a largely cosmetic victory at the start of the Maine caucuses. But the impression of Carter as a fresh, new winning politician grew.

Udall and Bayh, both of whom had misgauged the psychological impact of Iowa, were now back on their heels. Udall had a strong organization in New Hampshire, but Bayh, a relatively late starter, had no base. Carter again whipped them both, but with Udall running a respectable second and emerging as the likely liberal candidate.

In Massachusetts the next week, Carter — enthused by his New Hampshire victory — made a belated bid to win, hoping that momentum would make up for lack of grass-roots organization. It did not, and he ran a poor fourth, with Jackson, who poured money and labor manpower into the race, winning and positioning himself as the Democratic establishment threat to Carter.

Carter suddenly was in trouble, and his strategists look back now at the period just before the Florida primary as the greatest crisis of his campaign. Jackson was coming into Florida riding high and bent on cutting into Carter's middle-road appeal, threatening Carter's chances to beat Wallace and become the party's dragon-slayer.

35 Florida Visits

Carter, who had worked there 35 times, became irritable, lashing out at Jackson. His aides decided to take him off the trail for a weekend. He went back home to Plains and Tuesday, he beat Wallace by returned in control. The next a narrow three per cent, but it was enough to burst Wallace's bubble and restore the Carter winning image.

By now Carter was no longer playing psychological politics. He had established himself as a familiar figure and now he was going after delegates.

The old-line political leaders got the picture and climbed aboard the bandwagon. Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago endorsed Carter the next day, as did Wallace.

In a rush on June 9, Carter got enough pledges of support to assure his first-ballot nomination. The mid-July Democratic convention became a coronation.

He Began to Slip

At this juncture, Carter was considered a heavy favorite to beat the Republican nominee, and the polls so indicated. But shortly after the GOP selected Gerald Ford, Carter began to slip.

A series of mistakes plagued him, most notably his decision to grant an interview to Playboy magazine in which he volunteered remarks about lust and sin in street vernacular that did not sit well with his choir-boy image.

Also, a shaky start in his first of three debates with Ford — the result of excessive awe for the president of the United States, he said set him back. The polls showed Ford closing fast.

The second debate, however, bailed him out somewhat. Ford, in an inexplicable gaffe, said twice that Eastern Europe was not under the domination of the Soviet Union. The remarks precipitated roars of protest from ethnic groups, whose votes Ford was counting on to win key industrial states. The direct impact of the remark on these groups seemed to wane after a long-delayed apology and admission of error from Ford, but the indirect impact apparently did not.

Not Smart Enough

What was more important in the East Europe gaffe was the reinforcement Ford's performance gave to the nagging public perception that he was a lightweight, not smart enough to be president.

The fall campaign disintegrated into mutual name-calling after that. Carter, however, had on his side not only the traditional Democratic edge in voter registration but also organized labor and the twin pocketbook issues of inflation and unemployment ...y at Ford's feet.

...mmy Carter had started out as a different kind of politician — an outsider, a preacher of morality in politics, a political good shepherd seeking to enlarge his flock one by one. In the end, he relied on being a Democrat pushing the old dependable issues, and that proved to be enough.

Unchecked Population Growth Foretells Hard Times—Study

OTTAWA (CP) — Current population trends pose increasingly serious economic problems for both rich and poor provinces, but there is a way out, says an urban affairs department study.

The study, just released, recommends encouraging growth of major cities in the Atlantic provinces and Quebec and distributing population more evenly elsewhere.

This would make the poorer provinces more competitive economically with rich provinces like Ontario and reduce the problem of housing shortages in such cities as Toronto.

But if current trends continue unchecked to the year 2001, Ontario will gain half the country's increase in population at the expense of poorer provinces like Saskatchewan, the study says.

The authors, economists Chris Burke and Derek Ireland, outline what they believe will happen if current trends continue. But they also describe what may result if their own plan is carried out.

The authors say they expect increased government intervention in the economy in coming years. They look for more public ownership of transportation, communications and energy companies.

There will be limits on land speculation profits, wide-ranging environmental laws, joint public-private ventures and some form of guaranteed annual income, they say.

As for population trends, the authors project that Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia will take a larger share of the total population in 2001 than they did in 1971. All other provinces will lose.

In actual numbers, only one province—Saskatchewan—would have a smaller population in 2001 than in 1971. However, the authors say they are unable to project the 2001 Saskatchewan population.

"In terms of real importance in the nation, the three fastest-growing provinces would gain even more rapidly in stature and influence. The result would be to further intensify the trend towards a lack of balance and equality in interprovincial and federal-provincial relations."

Vancouver and Toronto would have to absorb 50 per cent of population increase in metropolitan centres. This would add considerably to the housing problem as family size was particularly small in big cities, requiring more housing units.

But the authors say they doubt that the trend will continue. Since 1971, the Atlantic provinces and Saskatchewan had stemmed migration of their residents to richer provinces and were attracting new residents.

Perhaps regional economic disparities were starting to decrease.

Outlining their targets for different regions, the authors suggest that economic growth in the Atlantic provinces should centre principally on the region between Halifax and Fredericton. The Avalon Peninsula in Newfoundland was another good area for economic development.

Industries which depend on good transportation and services would not locate elsewhere in the Atlantic region.

In Quebec, Montreal and Quebec City must be developed economically as the economic strength of the province depends on these cities, the study says.

The economic turn-around for Quebec will not come until the mid-1980s, the authors say. Until then, the problem of developing a strong French culture in the province will take priority over economic matters.

The authors set a target for economic growth in Ontario that is less than current trends would indicate for the year 2001.

The Ontario government is already trying to divert population and economic growth away from Toronto and, the authors say, continuing this policy may bring benefits in the quality of life in Ontario. But Toronto still will expand at a rate well above the national average.

Manitoba has been trying to encourage people to stay in rural areas rather than migrate to bigger cities. However, tht authors say a highly-developed Winnipeg able to compete with other large North American cities for business is important to the provincial economy.

The projection for Saskatchewan is substantial population and economic gains for Regina and Saskatoon. The authors recommend more expansion in agriculture and agricultural service centres in smaller communities.

New cities in the Athabasca oil sands region and Alberta government efforts to divert growth from Edmonton and Calgary probably will succeed in keeping those two cities from expanding too rapidly, the study says.

If the natural resources boom declines in B.C., Vancouver is likely to take an even higher proportion of the province's growth in population, the study says.

Air, rail and road links to such centres as Prince George, Prince Rupert and Kamloops should be improved to relieve some of the growth pressure on Vancouver.

The effect of these policies would be to reduce economic disparities and stem the population flow to Ontario, Alberta and B.C., the authors say.

For example, they say that if current trends continue Halifax will have a population of only 291,000 in 2001, up from 222,000 in 1971. But if their policy was followed the Nova Scotia city would have a population of 424,000 in 2001.

Toronto's population would rist to 5.2 million in 2001 from 2.6 million in 1971 under trend forecasts. But the target outlined in the study is 4.2 million.

Tire Change Fatal

QUESNEL (CP) — Moroslav Popovic, 54, of Hudson Hope, was killed Sunday when a hay wagon was struck by another vehicle on Highway 97, about 17 miles south of here. Police said Popovic was apparently changing a tire on the wagon when a car struck it in the rear.

U.S. Media Fails to Cover News for Elderly

NEW HAVEN (AP) — The founder of a newspaper put out by and for elderly persons wishes there was no need for it.

"It's a shame we have to exist," said VISTA volunteer Greg Huth, who recently stepped down as editor of The Elder. "We are doing the work of the big newspaper and television stations."

Huth says the major United States media carry many advertisements directed at the elderly but no serious news about them.

"There is no news about older persons except cute stuff, such as when somebody turns 104 years old in a nursing home," said Huth.

To try to fill that gap, Huth recruited college students and senior citizens as volunteer reporters in 1975. A board of directors of mostly elderly persons was set up to advise the staff on business matters and provide story ideas.

Huth began The Elder with a $300 grant from Yale University. Its annual operating budget has grown to $21,000.

"My ideal was to start a newspaper run by, and accountable to, senior citizens," said Huth.

After 15 issues, he said, "The Elder has been a meaningful experience for our older reporters. We need them, and they know they are helping their own people. It has given the people a chance to develop their writing skills."

The Elder's articles have dealt with topics such as transportation and drug discounts for senior citizens, nursing home regulations, retirement planning, social security and diets.

A six-page "Elder Insurance Guide" discussed details and costs of every major medical plan available for older persons in Connecticut.

Huth, who plans to develop a theatre company for the elderly, had been the only paid staff member of The Elder. But revenues are great enough now to pay for three part-time employees — an editor, assistant editor and advertising director.

Huth says the paper has a circulation of 4,000 but estimated that up to 8,000 people see each monthly issue.

Scientist Hopeful On Cure for MS

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Toronto scientist says he may have found a cure for multiple sclerosis, a wasting disease that strikes young adults.

Dr. Edwin Eylar, director of the Playfair Neurosciences Institute, told a news conference he has isolated a brain protein that can bring about recovery in monkeys with a nerve disease that resembles multiple sclerosis.

The new treatment will be tested on eight patients in about six weeks and Dr. Eylar is looking for volunteers under the age of 35 who have had the disease for less than five years.

"We don't want people to get all excited," he said. "We don't know yet if it has even a 50-50 chance of working in people."

Multiple sclerosis occurs when the fatty substance which insulates the nerves of the brain and spinal cord begins to degenerate. As a result messages from the brain to the muscles are interrupted, impairing the victim's sight, speech, walking, balance and sensations.

Helicopters Used to Quash War of Spears

PORT MORESBY (Reuter) — Police using helicopters claim successes in a campaign to stop bloody battles in Papua-New Guinea fought by tribesmen with bows and arrows, hardwood spears and axes.

During the last year alone the fighting has involved 17,000 warriors, of whom 1,500 claim successes in a cam- were arrested.

Police say 29 people were killed and 211 known persons injured. Six hundred acres of coffee bushes and food-growing plots were destroyed.

Helicopters help the police to identify the warriors who on conviction are liable to a sentence of up to 10 months with hard labor.

The fighting takes place in Chimbu, the most densely populated province of Papua-New Guinea with 200,000 people packed into an area of 2,260 square miles.

Fighting—for prestige, land, pigs or women—was the chief preoccupation of the Chimbu people long before the first white men entered their valleys in 1933.

Indeed, bodies with axe and arrow wounds floating down the Wahgi River as it left the mountains to the south were the first indication that anyone lived in what was hitherto thought to be uninhabited country.

Fighting is believed to have intensified in recent years as pressures on the old ways of life increased.

Police say much of the recent trouble has stemmed from unemployed and bored young men being urged to fight by older men trying to reassert their influence in the face of change.

One method tried by the authorities in an effort to stem the bloodshed was by urging traditional leaders to use their influence.

This has met with little success: Photographs taken from the police helicopter show elderly men wearing the peaked cap of office formerly issued to government-appointed officials prominent on the battlefield.

It also is not clear if the old leaders could stop the fighting if they tried.

The authorities tried using traditional methods to stop the fighting earlier this year, holding feasts and meetings. But no final solution was reached.

"The problem is that the fighting stops for a while and then something happens and it starts all over again," says Provincial Commissioner Jack Bagita.

He believes one cause of continuing disputes is a change in the medium of compensation payments, from pigs to cash and trade-store goods.

"The cash component has gone very much out of proportion: their demands are much more unreasonable these days," he says.

In August this year, police tried new tactics, using a chartered helicopter for reconnaissance flights.

At first the warriors saw no threat in the helicopter. They even waved to it and then got back to the serious business of showering arrows on their opponents.

But later they were arrested, confronted with incriminating aerial photographs and charged with riotous behavior or carrying offensive weapons.

Since then, there has been a sharp drop in the number of fights, police claim.

For the number of persons involved in the fighting, the death toll of 29 over the last 12 months appears low.

Police attribute this to the inefficiency of the weapons used: unflighted arrows and cumbersome, multi-pronged hardwood spears seven feet long and axes, and to the formal and ritualistic nature of the combat.

HOW TO MIX A HORSESHOT

Its name not withstanding, the Horseshot is not a case for the veterinarian, but rather a mixed drink of the Smirnoff school, a sort of Bloody Mary with the extra flavour kick of horse radish.

But the Horseshot is no second runner. With a charm and nip all its own, this great red beauty can keep up with the best of them.

To make a Horseshot, pour 1½ oz. Smirnoff into a tall glass with ice, fill with tomato juice, add horse radish to taste and stir. Sip slowly.

Meatless Filling Oven Dish

By MARY MOORE

Vegetarians are coming on strong in the mail and I must give them more time and space.

Because my Chicken Florentine is so much in demand I decided to make a Florentine casserole for the vegetarians.

This is full of nutritive ingredients and mouth watering flavors so our meat eaters will enjoy it too. It is a complete main course.

NOODLES FLORENTINE
(Serves 6)

6 oz. ¼" noodles (packed down in your 4-cup measure to fill to 4-cup mark)
1 10-oz. pkg. raw spinach
2 c. (1 lb.) cottage cheese
½ c. dairy sour cream
½ c. grated Parmesan
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. Tabasco
¼ tsp. basil
¼ tsp. thyme
¾ c. fine dry bread crumbs
1 tbsp. melted butter or margarine

Sauce:

1 sachet (2 tsp.) chicken soup base
1 tbsp. flour
1 tbsp. margarine
1 c. boiling water

Cook noodles in large potful boiling water with ½ teaspoon salt, 15 to 20 minutes until very soft. Drain through colander.

Wash spinach. Drain well. Cook in pot in only the water clinging to leaves, turning over once or twice, until tender. Drain through sieve and chop. Turn into large bowl. Add cottage and Parmesan cheeses, sour cream, salt, Tabasoc, basil and thyme. Gently stir in noodles. Turn into 1½-quart casserole.

To make sauce blend chicken soup base, flour and margarine, then stir in boiling water until thick. Pour all over casserole ingredients. Cover all over with crumbs made by melting the butter or margarine and stirring in crumbs. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 40 to 45 minutes.

This is so flavorful and filling all you need to serve with it for your main course is a sliced marinated tomato, cucumber and onion salad.

On my desk is a colorful, flavorful slice of a light fruit cake rich with walnuts, whole red and green cherries and candied pineapple.

Vegetarian Noodles Florentine tasty for all

Mary Moore

Alert fruit cake bakers will recognize the similarity to our popular Dark Blond Florida Fruit Cake. But we have extended the batter and substituted walnuts to make a higher yield at a lower cost.

It is much cheaper to buy fruits and nuts in a specialty nut store by the pound than to buy them in 2 or 4 or 8-ounce containers in the supermarket.

1976 RICH BLOND FRUIT CAKE
(2 loaf pans)

1¼ c. butter
1¼ c. granulated sugar
6 large eggs
2 c. plus 3 tbsp. unsifted all-purpose flour
¾ tsp. baking powder
¾ tsp. salt
¾ lb. whole glace cherries (mixed red and green)
1 lb. chopped candied pineapple
1 lb. (4 c.) whole or coarsely chopped walnuts
4 tsp. vanilla
2½ tbsp. lemon juice

Cream butter and sugar together until very light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat in each one as you add it, until smoothly blended. Sift the unsifted flour with the baking powder and salt. Mix ½ cup of this flour mixture through the prepared fruits and nuts which have been mixed together. Sprinkle remaining flour mixture over creamed mixture and stir until blended. Stir in vanilla and lemon juice. Add floured fruits and nuts and stir well.

Turn into two standard loaf pans (9x5x2½") lined with three thicknesses of wax paper, brushing top sheet generously with butter. Put waterpan below cakes. (Three-quarters fill broiler pan with boiling water after it is in position in oven.) Bake at 250 deg. Fahr. about 3 hours or until top feels firm to touch. (Cover with loose sheet of foil after 2 hours.) Cool in pans on cake rack. This cake is moist enough that it slices perfectly within 24 hours. It freezes well, if carefully freezer-wrapped.

Green Bacon

Interesting and unusual.

8 or 10-ounce package frozen Brussels sprouts
Bacon.

Cook sprouts according to package directions; drain. Wrap a piece of bacon (½ of a slice cut crosswise) around each sprout; fasten each with a toothpick. Arrange on a rack in a broiler pan and broil about 4 inches from high heat, turning once, until bacon is cooked — about 4 minutes on each side. Remove picks. Cut any very large sprouts in half lengthwise before wrapping. Makes 1 dozen or more.

Flat Bottom Better

Warped saucepans and skillets perform inefficiently. Utensils with flat bottoms hug the heating units and get the most out of them.

SPICY RUSSIAN CITRUS TEA

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press

After we had traced Russian Tea back to a 1925 cookbook that includes recipes from various parts of the United States, another researcher told us that in recent years this delicious beverage has been particularly favored in the south. This may be because.

Present-day cooks who are in a "waste not, want not" mood may be interested in the following directions for grating the peel usually discarded from oranges and lemons, drying it at home in an oven and using it in the tea instead of citrus juice. One caution: commercially dried orange and lemon peel is not suitable for use in this particular recipe.

RUSSIAN TEA

3 tea bags
15 whole cloves
3 whole cinnamon sticks
2 tablespoons home-dried grated orange peel, see directions below
1 teaspoon home-dried grated lemon peel, see directions below
3 cups boiling water

Into a large teapot, turn the tea bags, cloves, cinnamon, grated orange and lemon peel. Add water; stir; steep 5 minutes. Serve in 6 to 8-ounce glasses; use a tea strainer and put a silver teaspoon in each gaiss to absorb the heat as you pour the tea. Pass sugar. Makes 4 servings.

DRIED GRATED ORANGE AND LEMON PEEL

Wash and dry 5 oranges; grate enough peel from them to make 6 tablespoons. Wash and dry 6 lemons; grate enough peel from them to make 6 tablespoons. Spread the orange peel in a single layer over a large cookie sheet; spread the lemon peel in a single layer over another large cookie sheet. Dry in a preheated 200-degree oven, alternating and turning the pans as necessary, for about 1 hour. Cool. Makes about 3 tablespoons of each kind of peel. Store in small, covered jars. The dried peels not needed for the Russian Tea may be added in judicious amounts to baked products, sauces and frostings.

High Calcium Diet Cuts Lead Hazards

WORCESTER, Mass. (AP) — A study has found that a balanced diet that includes plenty of calcium may be good insurance against lead poisoning in children.

The study, financed by the National Science Foundation, was based on interviews with families of about 50 children who had large amounts of lead in their bloodstream.

Lead poisoning can impair development of the brain and nervous system and can cause anemia, hyperactivity and, in some cases, death.

Lead is found in automobile exhaust, in many factories and sometimes in canned food but the major source for children, public health authorities say, is the lead-based paint used in many homes built before the Second World War.

Curious or hungry children sometimes eat chips of the paint.

Interviews with mothers showed that in most cases, the children were not getting enough calcium in their diet, said Ann Ewsolowski, a student at Holy Cross College who participated in the study.

"We're not saying that a child's whole diet should consist of milk which is rich in calcium. If a body is to retain calcium, a balanced diet is important.

"What the study showed is that if children do not get enough calcium, it is more likely he or she will retain lead absorbed in the blood system."

Alan A. Clark, assistant professor of chemistry at Clark University and a co-ordinator for the project, said lead and calcium have similar chemical action.

"What we think can happen is that the body can mistake lead for calcium, and thus absorb it," he said.

Yamuna Lingappa, a medical technician with the city health department and another participant in the study, noted that many children who get lead poisoning live in poor areas where the homes are more likely to have retained leaded paint.

"So the people who need the nutritional diet the most are those who can least afford it," she said.

Controversial MSG Does Enhance Flavor

By TOM HOGE
Associated Press

What is MSG?

Back in 1908 a scientist at the University of Tokyo showed the effectiveness of monosodium glutamate (MSG) as a flavor booster. Today millions of pounds of it are consumed round the world each year.

Asians consume about four times as much MSG as we do, and it is a key ingredient in the dishes served by many Chinese restaurants. A report circulated eight years ago that some people might have an allergy to excessive amounts of MSG, and they began talking about the "Chinese restaurant syndrome"

Scientists supporting MSG then came forward. One was Dr. Lewis D. Stegink, professor of pediatrics and biochemistry at the University of Iowa College of Medicine. Said he:

"Glutamate is a common substance present in every normal diet," he added that human breast milk had large quantities of naturally-occurring glutamate.

All I know is that I have eaten a great deal of Chinese food with nothing more than a sense of well-being afterward. Here is a recipe in which MSG is used very sparingly with very tasty results.

½ cup rice
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1 medium potato
8 cups water
8 ounces round steak
1 teaspoon vegetable oil
3 teaspoons soy sauce
½ teaspoon sugar
Pinch MSG
1 teaspoon corn flour
1 teaspoon water
½ teaspoon salt
2 spring onions, chopped
¼ teaspoon sesame oil

Rinse rice in cold water and strain; marinate with first measures salt and oil 20 minutes. Peel and slice potato thinly. Bring first measure water to boil and add rice and potato. Let boil at medium heat 15 minutes. Turn heat low and let boil 45 minutes till congee is smooth. Mince steak and marinate with second measure of oil, soy sauce, sugar, MSG, corn flour and second measure water for 5 minutes. Put minced steak in boiling congee, stir and break up any lumps. Bring to boil for 1 minute. Add second measure salt, spring onion and sesame oil and serve.

Turbot Good Protein, Low Price

By HILDA BEASTALL

Frozen turbot is a fish special to buy whenever the chance occurs. In solid fillets it keeps well in a top of refrigerator freezer for three to four weeks, giving fine flavored meals of high quality protein at a low budget price. Sold in one-pound packages or larger, there is no waste for the homemaker cooking for one or for a large family. Cooking time for the fish is no more than 15 minutes.

A total of 25 to 35 minutes includes the cooking of vegetables for the chowder and in the Casserole dish.

Turbot is a delicately textured to equal sole; not remembering sole, we think it is delicious without comparing with other fish.

Skillet of Stuffed Turbot

2 Tbsp. soft margarine
1 tsp. fine chopped onion
1 Tbsp. chopped celery leaf
1 Tbsp chopped parsley
1 slice soft wholewheat bread
2 fillets turbot, partly thawed
Salt, lemon juice, margarine, paprika

Partially thaw frozen turbot while fixing vegetables.

In skillet or frypan, melt margarine; add onion, celery leaf and parsley. Cook for 3 minutes. Add bread crumbs. Mix together in pan. Push to one side.

Lay one turbot fillet in pan, place all the cooked filling on top, spreading evenly. Lay second fillet on top. Add more margarine to pan if needed.

Cook gently for five minutes. Divide fish into two or three portions as required; then turn each portion carefully with spatula to cook five minutes on second side. Or, cover and cook gently without turning.

Turbot Casserole

2 Tbsp soft margarine
1 small onion
¼ cup finely diced carrot
½ cup finely diced celery
½ cup finely diced Jerusalem artichoke
2 pieces frozen turbot (about 4 ounces)
1 Tbsp soft margarine
2 Tbsp. whole wheat flour
½ cup milk from skim powder
¼ cup ground cashew nuts
1 Tbsp chopped parsley
½ tsp salt
Wheat germ

In same saucepan, melt one tablespoon margarine; mix in the flour until smooth, then stir in milk.

Continue stirring, add nuts, parsley and salt. When bubbling, pour over contents of casserole. Sprinkle with wheat germ.

Lightly cook some chopped kale or sliced green cabbage to serve with this delicious dish; and heat small muffin-size homemade wholewheat buns to make a complete supper dish for two or three.

Fish chowder is too seldom made at home, yet is no more difficult than a vegetable soup. In its most economical and most nutritious form, fish chowder has for a base the liquor boiled out of fish bones, heads, skin and tails.

When these are available as with the home fisherman, wash these trimmings and simmer for about 30 minutes in water. Drain very thoroughly to remove chances of a bone left in the stock. After straining, the liquor is used for fish chowders or soups.

This turbot Chowder is a city version without benefit of bones, but it does have a combination of many fine flavors and it takes only 30 minutes of cooking time.

Turbot Chowder

2 pieces frozen turbot (about 4 ounces)
2 Tbsp diced pork jowl pieces
2 whole small garlic cloves
1 cup cold water (or vegetable stock)
2 cups diced raw potatoes
½ cup diced raw carrot
½ cup diced celery with leaves
¾ tsp salt
2 Tbsp chopped parsley, kale, swiss chard

Dice the frozen turbot with a sharp knife. Put into saucepan with pork jowl (bacon will do but is more expensive), whole garlic and water. Bring to boil and gently simmer.

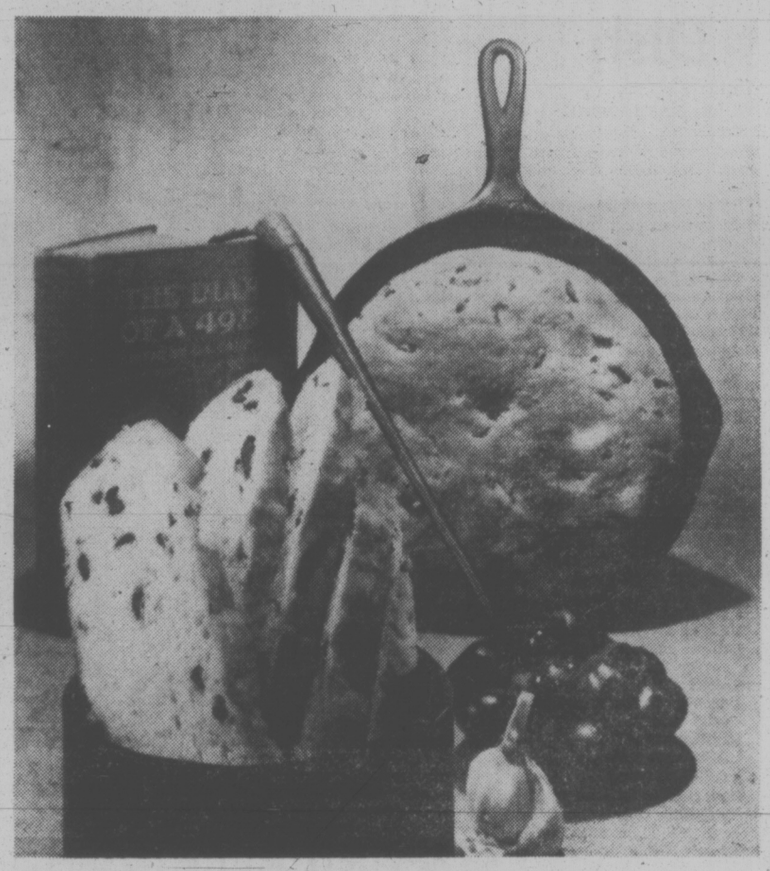
Add more vegetable stock saved from previous vegetable cooking, or use milk from skim powder to make sufficient liquid to serve 4 or 6 depending on whether you serve it as a main course for lunch or a soup before dinner.

Any fish will do. If caught locally, and you have all the bits and pieces you will be blessed with a better chowder. But do be sure there are no bones left in to spoil the effect.

Chowder should be thick and rich, nourishing and delicious, a meal for a chilly November day.



Olive bread of gold-rush days

Olive Skillet Bread

During California gold rush days a heavy skillet heated by a campfire was frequently the only "oven" available for baking. And "home" baking was the only source of bread for those out prospecting for gold.

Thanks to the Padres who established the mission trail, however, there were ingredients such as ripe olives available to vary the monotony of daily staples.

Olive trees to produce precious cooking oils were among the first plantings in Spanish California.

RIPE OLIVE SKILLET BREAD

1 can pitted ripe olives
4 cups biscuit mix
½ teaspoon garlic powder
¼ cup dehydrated mashed potato flakes
3 tablespoons minced onion
1 cup grated monterey jack cheese
½ cup sour cream
¾ cup milk
2 tablespoons melted butter
1 egg, lightly beaten

Drain olives, cut into wedges. In large bowl mix together biscuit mix, garlic powder, potato flakes, minced onion, olives and cheese. Measure remaining ingredients into separate bowl and mix together thoroughly.

Add liquid all at once to dry ingredients. Stir just until flour is moistened. Turn into well greased 9-inch skillet. Flour hands and pat into rounded shape. Brush with butter, if desired. Bake in 375 degree F. oven about 45 minutes or until tests done.

Makes 1 (9-inch) round loaf.

Try a Little Moderation

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

We know that we can't please everyone. But some days it seems we can't please anyone. We've been sifting through a recent batch of letters, and discover that we've succeeded in annoying beef producers and vegetarians producers and vegetarians — both at the same time. The argument is over meat consumption.

We gave our opinion in an earlier column: most people in North America eat too much meat. For some reason — habit, we guess — many people don't think they've really had a meal until they've sat down to an eight or 10-ounce steak. That large a serving of meat is unnecessary — and it can be harmful.

Besides containing protein and other good nutrients, meat is very high in saturated fat. A 10-ounce steak contains about 100 grams of saturated fat. That's all the fat you need in a day. But what about the other foods you eat in a day: cheese, milk, eggs and other forms of meat? They also contain certain amounts of fat.

You need those other foods, and the nutrients they give you, to ensure you're eating a balanced diet. But if you're eating all those foods, as well as a 10-ounce steak, you're getting far too much fat.

By now, you've all heard something about saturated and unsaturated fats. Large amounts of fat can be dangerous to your health. Polyunsaturated fats are better for you than saturated ones. For the good of your health, you should either consume equal amounts of saturated and polyunsaturated fats (up to your daily quota of 100 grams) or more polyunsaturates than saturates.

The fat in meat, besides being highly saturated, gives you about 10 times the amount of saturated fatty acids than you would get in unsaturated fat. And, if you're eating a large steak or other piece of meat every day, that means that most of the fat in your diet is saturated, rather than polyunsaturated. All in all, that's not good for you.

Because we only need a certain amount of fat in our daily diet, and because that fat should be, for the most part, unsaturated, we strongly recommend that you limit your servings of meat to about three or four ounces. You'll get all the nutrients you need, and avoid the danger of too much saturated fat in your diet.

You may well understand how a recommendation like that could upset the beef producers. They want to sell all they can: the more you eat, the better for their business. But strangely enough, our opinion also offended vegetarians. They wrote, asking us why we hadn't taken a firm stand and told everyone to give up meat altogether.

Our answer? Meat is too important. Don't stop eating it completely.

We devoted an entire column to the question of whether or not children should be raised on vegetarian diets. We think not. While a grown adult, with careful and precise attention to the kinds of foods he eats, can live a healthy, nutritious life as a vegetarian, growing children, teenagers, pregnant women, and even women who plan someday to be pregnant, need meat in their diet.

The nutritional needs of a growing body are high. We cannot afford to eliminate a food that is as nutritious as meat. We repeat: you don't need a lot of meat. But you do need some. A small amount every day will provide you with high quality protein, plenty of iron and zinc (in forms your body will use efficiently) along with certain vitamins and minerals.

Very few foods can come close to matching the food value of meat — especially in the diet of growing children. Our bodies need all the help they can get to grow.

Some people may try to tell you that vegetarianism is the natural way to live, but there's no real evidence to support that. There is especially nothing to prove to us that it could possibly be good for children. True, children in many countries are living on essentially meatless diet. But we would question that they are being given the chance to grow and develop to their full potential. How different would their growth be if they had some meat in their diet?

So, at the risk of offending everyone all over again, we maintain our position. Meat is too nutritious a food to remove from your diet. But like any good thing, you can get too much of it. Don't let yourself be unduly influenced by the people selling meat, or the ones advocating vegetarianism. Try eating a moderate amount of meat (3-4 ounces per serving) and you'll be eating right.

Judy's Salad

Delightful old-fashioned combination.

½ cup light cream
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon sugar
¼ cup tarragon vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
2 medium heads Boston lettuce, torn
⅓ cup chopped scallions
Freshly ground pepper to taste

Stir together the cream, sugar, vinegar and salt; chill. Just before serving, toss with the lettuce, scallions and pepper. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Tomatoes: Delicious Any Way

tiny bennett

My wife and my daughter, like myself, are tomato freaks and we eat this superb fruit (?) vegetable (?) raw with salads; as a fine sandwich filler, plain or with cold meat; broiled or fried or baked with breakfast or a main course entree; stewed with onion, selery and fresh basil; and just plain as one would eat an apple. It is interesting to note that early in its introduction to Europe if was known as the "love apple".

Tomatoes are extremely easy to can, they freeze well for cooking purposes and home growers can very easily turn out all kinds of relishes, sauces and preserves.

In my column this week I'm simply going to present some of the very pleasant ways that I serve and use tomatoes and I hope that some of them will be new to readers.

There are many types of tomatoes, in an astonishing range of colors. There are some people who laud the flavor of the big beefsteaks but my personal choice falls on the typical medium-sized standard red that is firm, juicy, fairly thin-skinned and of rich flavor.

Tomatoes are a valuable form of food and a good source of both vitamins and minerals. With only 22 calories per 3½ ounce raw serving this is one vegetable that is worthy of a solid place in every family's daily diet.

IN SALADS

To serve tomatoes plain as a side dish, or in a salad, remove from the refrigerator and allow them to warm up to just short of room temperature when the full flavor will become apparent.

Cut out the bud end, slice or qaurter, sprinkle with salt and a little dried basil, and serve.

WITH SLICED ONION

This is a side dish that I adore with chops, a steak or just simply as a luncheon snack with a piece of Old Cheddar cheese and a hunk of crusty bread and butter.

Thirty minutes before a meal, remove the bud end of two or three tomatoes and with a very sharp knife cut into thin slices and pop into a serving bowl.

Cut a medium sized, peeled mild onion into even thinner slices and add to the bowl, together with one tablespoon olive oil, one tablespoon wine or cider vinegar, and one tablespoon dark soy sauce. Sprinkle with just a little salt, some ground black pepper and a smidgin of dried basil and leave for 30 minutes to blend flavors, turning to mix well from time to time.

TOMATO AND BACON

This very easy breakfast dish is a relic from my Second World War army days when it was made rather indifferently by army cooks using canned tomatoes. However, not even their heavy hands ruined it for me.

Into a seasoned but ungreased skillet place a layer of sliced bacon and brown on a medium heat, turning constantly. Remove the cooked bacon to a dish covered with kitchen paper to drain and keep hot. Pour away most of the fat from the skillet and gently brown thin slices of tomato. Serve together with the juices, with the bacon on a heated breakfast plate.

The weight watcher's version of this dish calls for broiling the bacon and tomato and pouring away and discarding the fat as it runs.

A superb bacon and tomato sandwich can be made by cooking the bacon and tomato as above and serving between rounds of hot toasted, buttered bread. This is eaten with a knife and ford — it's hot, hot, HOT.

TO FREEZE TOMATOES FOR COOKED DISHES

A supply of tomatoes in the home freezer not only saves money on the household budget, it becomes a Godsend for making soups, sauces and dishes such as country stews. It is quite a simple process, even though it does call for skinning and gently cooking the tomatoes.

Get a supply of heavy-duty freezer bags or plastic-coated freezer containers ready. Drop the tomatoes (use very firm ones only) into a big bath of boiling water for 30 seconds, remove with a slotted spoon and chill fast in very cold water with ice cubes. The bud ends and skin will now comes off easily, with the aid of a kitchen knife . . . the skins should slip off in your fingers. Put the peeled tomatoes into a kettle on medium heat until the juices just begin to run, then lower the heat and cook for five minutes. Take the tomatoes out one by one, dip briefly in cold water, drain and pack into containers. Add dash of basil and top with juice and freeze swiftly.

"NO-FAULT" ARGUING: KEY TO A SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE
The idea of "winning" marital conflicts is an illusion, since one partner's "victory" inevitably becomes a loss for both. That's because the attitude of "winning" an argument reduces a marriage to a power struggle . . . and when power becomes the prevailing force, love is diminished. There's bound to be some conflict in every marriage, but the November issue of Reader's Digest shows you how to avoid letting those conflicts turn your marriage into an armed camp. Don't miss "NO-FAULT" ARGUING: KEY TO A SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE, just one of more than 40 articles and features in the November issue of Reader's Digest. At your newsstand today!

dear abby

Double Honor

DEAR ABBY: I've never seen a problem like mine in your column.

"I have two fathers who are equally dear to me. My "real" (biological) father and my adoptive father.

When I was four, my parents divorced, but my father always kept in close touch and let me know that he loved me all the years I was growing up.

My mother remarried when I was six, and I can truthfully say that my adoptive father could not have been more wonderful to me.

I am being married at a church wedding. My problem is which father I should choose to give me away. I don't want to hurt the feelings of either father by choosing the other. It was suggested that the ideal solution would be to have an uncle give me away. Please help me. — TORN

DEAR TORN: Why not ask both fathers to share the honor? And when the clergyman asks, "Who gives this bride away?" both fathers can respond in unison, "We do."

DEAR ABBY: I am 19 and in my sophomore year at college. Last year, I fell in love with a beautiful, sensitive girl of 18. She's a high school graduate who has many fine qualities, but her English is atrocious.

She says, "I seen you there," or "you was or you wasn't there," or "I throwed it out," or "them there people."

I can't understand how she was graduated from high school.

I have tried to help her without nagging but have had very little success. I would like to introduce her to my family because I do care for her, but I would know that they will question my judgment when they hear her talk.

What should I do? — ORLANDO

DEAR ORLANDO: Assuming she's as interested in learning to speak properly as you are to have her learn, adult education or tutoring is my recommendation.

DEAR ABBY: This may sound silly, but here goes. My husband and I have been married for two years, but before we were married he dated my sister for a short time.

I had almost forgotten about that until last week. My sister dropped by, and the two of us went shopping together. When we returned, we were greeted by a couple of burglars who had been hiding in my house. They ransacked the place and left us bound and gagged.

When my husband came home from work a few hours later and found the two of us tied up, to my surprise, he released my sister first!

Abby, I was very hurt, and now I can't help but wonder if maybe he still cares for my sister. What do you think! — TIED IN KNOTS

DEAR TIED: I think your husband was being courteous to a guest — no more, no less. Forget it.

DEAR ABBY: I received an invitation to a golden wedding anniversary party. I am only an acquaintance, not a dear friend or relative, but I was told by a relative of the celebrating couple to bring money rather than a gift because the golden wedding couple are having a money tree. With the money collected, they plan to take a cruise.

I asked how much I would be expected to contribute and was told, "At least a dollar for every year the couple have been married."

Abby, that's a minimum of $50 — as much as I gave my own niece for a wedding present!

What do you think? — TREED READER

DEAR TREED: I think you should give whatever you feel is appropriate and no more.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is all the time bringing home nuts, candy and gooey pastry even though he knows how hard I'm trying to lose weight.

He's lucky. He can eat anything and not gain an ounce. If I just LOOK at a piece of candy, I gain a pound.

My husband has made dirty cracks about how fat I am, so why does he tempt me with all that fattening stuff? He knows I don't have any willpower. — NO HELP FROM HUBBY

DEAR NO HELP: He tempts you because: (1) Consciously or unconsciously he wants you to be fat. (2) He's unkind and inconsiderate. (3) He enjoys sweets and figures that your lack of willpower is your problem, not his.

FOOLISH CONFESSION

DEAR FOOLISH: Silence is not always golden. It is sometimes "guilt."

Blood Vessels and Heart Surgery

LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

When an artery is clogged and surgery is necessary to reopen it, how is it performed? It is a mystery to me. — Miss Y. B., Ohio

DEAR MISS B.:

Even sophisticated physicians are overwhelmed by the mystery of modern-day surgery performed on the blood vessels and the heart.

Sometimes a portion of the blood vessel is removed and replaced with a Dacron or Teflon, "sleeve." In other cases, a part of the vein, usually the saphenous vein in the leg, is removed and used to bypass the blocked artery.

There are also techniques by which an artery can be opened and the blocked portion reamed out, so that the clogging plaque is removed.

The same type of surgery is used in the heart bypass operation so commonly employed in people who have coronary artery disease.

This surgery is a tribute to the rsearch surgeons who, in combination with engineers and chemists, have made these advances possible.

My feet become swollen as the day progresses. At night I can push the skin in almost a half inch. In the morning the swelling is gone. — Mr. R. W., Kan.

DEAR MR. W.:

The swelling you describe is known as "pitting edema."

This may be caused by simple or by complicated conditions. Varicose veins or marked overweight (especially in people who stand on their feet all day) can cause this type of swelling.

It is also true that people with chronic heart disease, kidney disease, and vascular problems may have swelling. Consequently it is important for you to rule out all the reasons to be certain that an important one is not being overlooked.

One of our friends is a self-made mystic. As soon as we get together she makes prophesies and interrupts our dreams. Sometimes we are frightened by the thoughts she implants in our heads. How can we stop her? — Mrs. M.T.

Dear Mrs. T.:

Avoid her. Without an audience there can be no interpretation of your dreams to her. The art of dream interpretation is a very significant one when used by trained professionals such as psychologists or psychiatrists.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Isiah Robertson is a star — a real football hero. We were excited to learn that he is also a plant freak. He is big and bad on the football field, but a real softy at home.

We visited Isiah early one morning, and his lovely secretary, Lucille, greeted us with coffee and donuts. Isiah's bachelor home is elegantly decorated, immaculate (he told me he follows his guests around with a dust cloth) and filled with football memorabilia and many plants, each one cared for with love. It was beautiful to see this menace of the football field spraying his Boston fernn and trimming his plants.

He likes to talk about them, too. "I've been into plants for about three years. I started because I had a house to decorate and it seemed that plants were as important as furniture. I looked through all kinds of magazines for ideas and bought a lot of plants. Not really understanding what they needed, they all died. I cared for them according to the book and went by my chart. If it said water on Wednesday, I watered, whether the plant needed it on Monday or Friday. I was programmed.

"But then I began to talk to my plants. I got a spray bottle and went around and misted them. I said 'Hey, baby, I want you to be a really super plant. You know I'm going to take care of you. I love you and you love me, so you'd better grow,' and they did! Each plant was given to me by various young ladies in my life. They know where my head is at and what I like, so I get plants. Each one means a great deal to me.

"If plants die, it shouldn't put you off. Once you get into that fine plant focus, you can succeed with them. My plants know I love them. When a date is over for dinner, she'll look at the plants and see how well cared for they are — well, it doesn't hurt!

"I talk yo my dieffenbachia and it's getting so tall pretty soon it's going right through the ceiling. I'd say it's my favorite, but not too loud. The pothos on my TV is special to me. I spend more time with it than some of the others because it was sick, but now it's healthy and growing! When my plants aren't feeling well I send them to sick bay — in the living room. They always get better there.

"Right now most of my plants are in shock from transplanting. They haven't quite recovered, but I check them every day and they're picking up. I've only had one problem with mealybug, but it disappeared after I hit it with alcohol and water.

"I think I have my indoor scene together. I know what I like, how to care for them, when to water. No doubt I'll have lots more — never know who's coming to dinner!"

French Salad

Many French families now serve an American specialty: grated raw carrot salad. The French dress the salad with lemon juice or an oil-and-vinegar mixture instead of using mayonnaise as is often done in the U.S.A.

FREEZER SANDWICHES

Homemakers who pack school lunches every day can ease the burden by wise use of the home freezer. Fresh bread and many ingredients freeze well. A two-week supply of sandwiches can be made in one work session. Fillings that freeze include peanut butter, meat, fish, cooked egg yolks. For binders, use fruit juices, apple sauce or sour cream. Fillings that don't freeze are moist fillings, raw vegetables, egg white, mayonnaise.

SKILLET MEAL IN A JIFFY

The evening meal usually revolves around the hectic schedules of all the family members — Mom's and Dad's jobs, big brother's basketball practice, little sister's bedtime, assorted meetings, etc. What a challenge for the cook of the evening!

Skillet dinners that can be prepared in a jiffy will avoid the constant race with the clock! Dishes, which combine both meat and vegetables, are a great convenience in simplifying meal planning, and bring about a pleasant blending of flavors. Also, there are less dishes to wash and the meal is easily held for a short period for the one who is late for supper. A skillet for frypan with a tight-fitting lid is ideal for cooking this kind of meal. However, a dutch oven will be equally satisfactory.

If your family likes sausages, then the Sausage Macaroni Dinner is the one for you! It combines sausages, cooked macaroni and canned tomatoes. The Creamy Noodle Surprise recipe is a meal-in-a-dish that is very easy to follow. Simply prepare the white sauce, making use of the liquid from the vegetables, and add uncooked noodles, cooked ham or chicken and grated process cheese. Ground Beef Oriental Dinner is another top-stove dinner meal, made with ground beef and rice. A variety of vegetables and seasonings are added, making a super skillet supper!

You'll agree that the tantalizing odors from these dishes will bring the family to the kitchen before dinner is served. Don't forget the tossed salad to accompany them.

SAUSAGE MACARONI DINNER

1 pound sausages
2 tablespoons fat from sausages
½ cup chopped onion
3 cups cooked macaroni (1½ cups or 6 ounces uncooked)
½ teaspoon oregano or basil
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 28-ounce can tomatoes

Cook sausages in 1 inch of water on high heat until water evaporates. Brown and remove from pan. Cube sausages. Drain off fat, reserving 2 tablespoons. Saute onion in fat until transparent. Add macaroni, sausages, seasonings and tomatoes. Heat through. 6 servings.

CREAMY NOODLE SURPRISE

1 19-ounce can peas and carrots
¼ cup fat
¼ cup flour
⅔ cup skim milk powder
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
3 cups liquid (liquid from vegetables plus water)
5 ounces uncooked noodles
2 cups cubed cooked ham or chicken
1 cup (4 ounces) grated process cheese

Drain vegetables, reserving liquid. Melt fat. Blend in flour, skim milk powder and seasonings. Gradually add liquid from vegetables plus water. Stir and cook until smooth and thick. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer uncovered until noodles are tender (about 15 minutes). 6 servings.

Ground beef oriental dinner

GROUND BEEF ORIENTAL DINNER

1 pound ground beef
½ cup chopped onion
1 cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped green pepper (optional)
2 beef bouillon cubes
2½ cups water
1¼ cups uncooked rice
1 teaspoon garlic salt
1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1½ teaspoons curry powder or chili powder

Combine ground beef and vegetables and saute until meat is brown. Drain off excess fat. Dissolve bouillon cubes in water and add with remaining ingredients to browned meat. Bring to boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer until rice is tender (about 20 minutes). 6 servings.

Suitable Staple Storage

Making the most of your food dollar doesn't end at the store checkout. Products can deteriorate in quality if home storage conditions aren't satisfactory.

Here are a few tips that Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada have collected from various sources on the storage of a few staples.

Cornstarch may be kept 1 to 2 years in a closed container, in a dry area away from items with strong odors.

Baking powder and baking soda may be usually stored for 1 year after the date stamped on the box. They should be kept in a cool, dry area.

Brown, white, fruit and icing sugar may all be kept almost indefinitely as their quality does not deteriorate with age. All types should be stored in a dry area and brown and icing sugar should be kept in plastic bags to prevent hardening.

Molasses may be kept about two years if stored in a cold area. It may thicken and form sugar crystals if stored in an area that is too warm.

All-purpose flour may be kept about two years, if stored in a sealed container in a cool, dry area.

Edible oils with anti-oxidants added have a shelf life of at least two years when stored at room temperature. After opening, the shelf life is approximately one year.

CHOCOLATE SQUARE

New version of an old favorite.

4 squares (4 ounces) unsweetened chocolate
1 cup milk
1 cup flour, fork-stir to aerate before sifting
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 large eggs, separated
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon sugar

In a small saucepan over low heat melt together, stirring constantly, the chocolate and milk; set aside off heat. On wax paper stir together the flour, baking powder and salt. In a medium bowl beat egg whites until frothy; gradually beat in ½ cup of the sugar until whites hold stiff straight peaks. In a large bowl without washing beater, beat egg yolks and vanilla slightly; graudally beat in the remaining 1 cup sugar until thick and ivory color; add chocolate mixture and beat to blend. Graudally and gently beat in flour mixture, then egg whites. Turn into an ungreased 9 by 9 by 1¾-inch cake pan; spread evenly because cake will rise high. Bake in a pre-heated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in centre comes out clean—35 minutes. Let stand on wire racks for 10 minutes—cake will sink slightly. Turn out on rack and cool completely. Cover top and sides with chocolate-flavor whipped cream.

Bolivia 'Horror' Shocked Pepin

MONTREAL (CP) — Marcel Pepin, president of the World Federation of Labor, says he risked arrest in Bolivia last week because he was horrified by the conditions of workers and peasants there.

Mr. Pepin, a former president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), was placed under house arrest for 20 hours by the military government of Bolivia for making what were described as subversive remarks about the country's government.

The 50-year-old union leader arrived here Tuesday and recounted his experiences to the Montreal central council of the CNTU.

He said the official reason for his arrest was that he did not have government approval for a news conference.

"I knew I wouldn't have approval . . . before I went there, but after seeing the deplorable conditions I had to speak out.

"I could see for myself the human misery in the streets and I was appalled by the conditions of the miners, whose life expectancy after they enter the mines is about 15 years. The only way for them to get enough energy to continue working is to chew coca leaves all the time.

"I knew that children as young as 10 or 12 years old as well as women were forced to work under horrible conditions."

He said he was dismayed that union rights are violated and that union leaders must operate on a clandestine basis.

"The main reason for giving my news conference was that I knew there was a clandestine network and that my words of support would be relayed to all sorts of people."

He said reports that he had been hurt by police were false. He dislocated his shoulder accidentally.

PEPIN

After leaving Bolivia, Mr. Pepin travelled to Paraguay and Brazil. All three countries violate human rights and use torture as a means of repression, he said.

"I believe that if we can publicize the fact that rights are being violated in these countries, then maybe the governments will change their attitudes. These countries are scared of publicity."

30-DAY FAST ENDING WITH PRAYERS, SOUP

WASHINGTON (CP) — Weak but satisfied, two Canadians and an American put an end today to a 30-day fast they endured to protest U.S. nuclear-weapons policies.

Sister Mary Alban of Toronto said there would be a low-key ending to the fast as the trio begin several days of a juice-and-broth diet to accustom them once more to food.

"We're going to have sort of a quiet, prayerful ending with some joining of hands and so on," she said.

"It's amazing. We're really quite well . . . We're tired but we're well. They've lost about 30 pounds each. I've lost about 15."

James Douglass of Vancouver and Robert Schneider of San Francisco also participated in the fast. Along the way they were arrested for demonstrating in front of the White House without a permit starting a court contest the men hope will overturn a controversial anti-demonstration law.

Douglass, a former university professor and author, said the U.S. government lays charges to harass demonstrators, then drops the charges in court so the constitutionality of the law cannot be challenged.

The prosecutor applied to dismiss the charges in U.S. district court, saying the arresting officer was not available to testify, but the defendants refused to agree to dismissal.

The judge ordered that the trial continue in December, with a special hearing later this month on the constitutionality of the law.

The main target of the fasters was the refusal of the U.S. government to rule out first use of nuclear weapons in all circumstances. A related object of criticism was the missile-carrying Trident nuclear submarine, which is to be based near Vancouver at Bangor, Wash., and which the demonstrators consider a first-strike weapon.

Sister Mary, a member of the Sisters of St. Joseph in Toronto, said about 100 other persons in Canada and the United States staged fasts for brief periods to support them.

Basford Won't Act Over Morgentaler

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford said Monday he has made no attempt to intervene in the latest Quebec prosecution of Dr. Henry Morgentaler, charged with performing an illegal abortion.

Such an intervention would be improper, Basford said in a Commons reply to New Democrat Stuart Legatt (New Westminster).

"Whether people are prosecuted under the Criminal Code is a matter of sole and exclusive jurisdiction and responsibility of provincial authorities," Basford said.

Legatt asked whether Basford had interceded with the Quebec justice ministry on behalf of Morgentaler who next month will be tried for the fourth time on abortion charges.

Legatt said Morgentaler has already been acquitted three times on charges laid against him in Montreal, has served 10 months in jail despite the acquittals and appears to be the subject of harrassment.

The Last Of The Billionaires

Ludwig

MacArthur

NEW YORK (AP) — Daniel Ludwig lives in a New York penthouse, running his shipping empire and overseeing the creation of a timber plantation in the Brazilian Amazon.

Though miles apart, the men share a bond: they are the last two living U.S. billionaires, says Fortune magazine.

Both MacArthur and Ludwig were born in 1897, dropped out of school after Grade 8 and "operate through an intricate web of private companies about which there is only limited public information," the financial magazine says in its November issue.

There the parallel ends, says Lewis Beman, Fortune associate editor who wrote the article.

McArthur and Ludwig took different paths to become billionaires in a country that now boasts about 180,000 millionaires. They outlived the three other men who until recently shared their status as billionaires: Howard Hughes, J. Paul Getty and H. L. Hunt.

McArthur, whose late brother was playwright Charles MacArthur, is the only stockholder of the Chicago-based Banker's Life and Casualty, the 44th largest insurance company in the U.S.

He bought the failing firm for $2,500 in 1939, and uses some of its $863 million in assets as a financial base for what Fortune terms "an enormous real estate investment" that includes holdings in New York City, Florida and Colorado.

Ludwig, although not a recluse, "apparently values his privacy almost as much as Howard Hughes did," Fortune says. "Ludwig hasn't spoken to a journalist since 1963."

Born in South Haven, Mich., the son of a real estate agent, Ludwig started out with a tugboat fleet. After pioneering a new system for financing tankers in 1936, his fleet grew to the current 50 ships totalling nearly seven million tons.

Iranian Envoy Shot in Paris

PARIS (UPI) — Iranian diplomat Homayoun Keykavoussi, 46, is in grave condition today after being gunned down outside his home by an assailant claiming to belong to a movement opposing the government of Shah Mohammed Reza Pamlevi.

Three hours after the attack a man telephoned a French news agency to say the shooting was the responsibility of the Reza Rezai Movement, which "executed the representative in France of the Iranian gestapo."

"We have administered just punishment to an individual whose role is to hunt down progressive Iranians in France," the caller said.

Rezai is the name of an Iranian Marxist who was killed in a street fight with police in Tehran June 16, 1973.

Keykavoussi, cultural attache at the embassy, was returning to his apartment Tuesday when a man seized him on the sidewalk. While the two grappled, the assailant shouted to an accomplice on a motorcycle, "shoot him, shoot him."

The diplomat fell to the sidewalk with two bullets in his stomach. The two assailants fled.

Keykavoussi, father of two sons and a daughter, was taken to Beaujon Hospital where he was listed in grave condition.

The Iranian is the sixth diplomat attacked in Paris in the past two years.

NEB Wants More Data On Pipe

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Energy Board plans a second visit to the north before it makes a decision on a northern natural gas pipeline.

The board, which spent three weeks in the Northwest Territories this fall, said Tuesday it will open hearings in Whitehorse, Yukon, on March 1 to hear evidence from four new groups admitted to the pipeline proceedings.

It said the Yukon Association of Municipalities, the Yukon Teachers Association, the Yukon Conservation Society and the Alcan Pipeline Co. have been granted status as interested parties.

Admission of the new interveners follows the filing of an application by Foothills Pipe Lines Yukon Ltd. to build Canadian sections of the Alcan line that would move Alaskan gas to U.S. customers.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Michael Filipchuk, charged with robbing the Royal Bank at Fort and Government of $121 on Oct. 27, was released from custody Tuesday.

For more than an hour, Judge Blake Allan agonized over whether to release Filipchuk on a simple undertaking that he appear for his trial in county court, to be set at a later date.

Filipchuk appeared in Victoria provincial court on a remand. He had a swollen cheek and a black eye. The swollen cheek was believed to be the result of an infected tooth.

The court imposed a no-publication order on the proceedings dealing with why Filipchuk should or shouldn't remain in custody.

The judge attached several conditions to Filipchuk's release.

He is to report to a bail supervisor every Tuesady and every Friday and he is to live at MacAndrew Lodge, 1037 Lyall, Esquimalt, a psychiatric-care home.

The judge also ordered that Filipchuk might leave the home only under the supervision of "a responsible person."

Press Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Negotiations are scheduled to resume Monday between The Canadian Press and the Canadian Wire Service Guild, a company spokesman said Tuesday.

Deputy labor minister Thomas Eberlee, who has been acting as mediator in the negotiations since last week, said it was too soon to be optimistic or pessimistic about the bargaining sessions but that "progress has been made."

The major issue in the year-long contract dispute between CP, a national co-operative of 108 daily newspapers, and the guild, which represents 275 staff members in the bargaining unit, is a guild proposal for compulsory payment of union dues by all new employees whether they join the guild or not.

Five Remanded in Custody For Sentences on Rampage

Five Vancouver men, including a deaf mute, will spend the next four weeks in jail awaiting sentence on charges of mischief and possessing stolen goods.

Judge Blake Allan remanded the five in custody until Nov. 29 for sentence and presentence report after they pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Tuesday.

The charges arose from an incident Oct. 23 when the men ransacked a home on Price Road, near Ganges, Salt Spring Island.

Remanded in custody were Douglas Coleman 27, Richard LeClair, 20, Kenneth Roger Mandor, 19, Gordon Arthur Ramm, 18, and Russell William Snyder, 19, all from Vancouver.

During the rampage numerous boxes with personal papers and possessions were dumped on the floor, cans of meat opened and thrown on the floor, jars with preserves smashed, three wooden chairs broken, walls scraped and marked, ceilings burned, light fixtures smashed and a kitchen counter damaged.

The owners also reported several items stolen, including bedding, fireplace tools, cookware and a brass door knocker.

The men were arrested while leaving a ferry at Tsawwassen.

When the charges were read, an interpreter had to translate the proceedings in sign language for Snyder, a deaf mute.

The judge said the men had little right to expect leniency.

"There is no excuse for this kind of behavior. A strong deterrent is indicated. The public has a right to protection.

"My duty is to see to it that not only the accused don't repeat this kind of thing, but that others are deterred."

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

It is not often that a defender is end played at the completion of trick two, but such was the case in today's deal. However, by virtue of an excellent play, he pulled the wool over declarer's eyes, and sen tthe latter down to defeat.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	3 ◇	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♡

To tricks one and two ,West cashed the king and ace of hearts. He then pondered over what to lead to trick three.

Had he led a heart (in the full knowledge that there were no more hearts in the deck, declarer would have ruffed with the board's queen of spades , while simultaneously discarding the diamond four from the South hand. From here in, declarer's only loser would have been a trump trick to West's king.

Had he led a diamond instead, away from his king, dummy's queen would have won the trick. And, once again, declarer would have come home with a fulfilled contract.

He he led a club at trick three, he would have ambushed his partner's queen. Declarer would now have had himself, three club tricks, on the third of which he would have been enabled to discard his losing diamond (declarer could always reach dummy by leading a low trump towards the queen).

At trick three West led the nine of trumps, the queen was put up from dummy, and it won the trick. Can you blame declarer for assuming that East was the possessor of the king of trumps? At trick four he led dummy's remaining trump, and when East followed suit with a low one, declarer finessed his jack. To his amazement, West produced the king. West then led a heart, which declarer trumped. Dummy was then entered via the ace of clubs, after which the diamond queen was led and the finesse taken against East's hoped-for king. As is evident, West's king took the setting trick.

Again, it is difficult to censure declarer for taking the trump finesse. How could he have been that clairvoyant to know that West was leading the nine of trumps from an original holding of the doubleton K-9; and, in so doing, leaving his king subject to decapitation by declarer's ace? He just couldn't.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 1145 for the game today. Using all four each time but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 106. I shall be glad to check solutions, and will send hints to help in future games if requested.

Madame Was Once Go-Getter, Now Thinks of Jesus and Dying

WILLIAMSON, W. Va. (AP) — Claudia McCoy sits quietly these days, wheezing and chainsmoking and thinking of Jesus and dying.

Occasionally, she thinks about the days when she became a local legend running the most infamous bawdy house in southern West Virginia—and was becoming one of Mingo County's richest residents in the process.

"I used to be a real go-getter, baby," she said recently. "I used to be able to work 18 and 20 hours a day without stopping, but I'm all in now.

"I've enjoyed my life, though. I used to play the piano and sing them old hymns like nobody's business."

Approaching 75, Claudia now is a semi-invalid. She's had several strokes in the last few years and now spends most of her time smoking and reading the Bible.

When interviewed, she was sitting in a room just off the lobby of the Ritz Hotel, known as "The Alvon" back in the riproaring days when hundreds of miners came to drink and dance with "Claudia's girls."

Jolly Smith well remembers the Alvon. He used to make frequent visits when he was Williamson's police chief.

"I've raided her many a time," he said with a chuckle.

"Everything she did was illegal. She paid off everybody; the sheriff, the state police, everybody.

"The Alvon was a rough place. There were lots of girls working there, and I wouldn't have any idea the people killed in that club. I remember three were killed at one time.

"But," he added, "Claudia wasn't all bad. She also helped a lot of people. Folks around here were down on her because of the way she made her money but she didn't give a damn. She really made a lot of money. I'd say she's the biggest individual property owner in Mingo County."

"Well, it wasn't always that way," said Claudia, when asked about her holdings. "I was flat broke when I came here back in 1935. I had to hitch-hike into town."

She came from nearby Colman, Ky., where her late husband had run a store on Peter Creek.

"He died in 1930," she said. "Before that, he ran a general merchandise store and bootlegging joint. You had to do that back then or get in the soup line. I had 18 kids. Four of them were my own and the others I'd picked up off the street.

"I was flat broke when I got here," she said. "I pawned my rings and rented a cockroach-infested building and went from there to the biggest place in town when I bought the Williamson Hotel back in 1940."

She later got into tax trouble and sold the hotel. But she kept a vast amount of property scattered throughout the county.

"At one time me and the bank owned a lot of property in this town," she said. "But I'm selling now just as fast as I can before I leave here."

Luther (Pewter) Gilmore, a retired railroader and man about town, well remembers the Alvon.

"The boys bootlegged and the girls did the dating," he said. "Claudia just sat back and took her cut. I knew her back before she came to town. When her husband died, she decided she'd take on Williamson, and she made good, no doubt about it."

"I got into real estate," Claudia said. "I've walked all over these hills around here showing people houses. I finally owned so many I didn't know what to do with them."

She lit another cigarette, blew out a cloud of mentholated smoke and smiled.

Foul-Up After Foul-Up Mars Soviet Air Travel

By PETER OSNOS
Washington Post

MOSCOW — One day at the peak of the travel season several summers ago all flights from Moscow to the Soviet Far East were cancelled because of what the laconic announcement at Domeadedovo airport called "technical difficulties." It stranded 3,000 passengers.

They were joined on the second and third days by thousands more, until a small city of aggrieved travelers was sprawled all over the airport terminal — a stuffy glass building with no air conditioning — and in the surrounding forests outside Moscow.

The problem, it turned out, was that all 18 of the Yu-114 aircraft assigned to that route were grounded at the other end of the line, 6,000 miles away in Khabarovsk, because there was no fuel.

"It had not been delivered," said the Weekly Literary Gazette.

"It was an oversight, negligence on someone's part." It took weeks to clear up the congestion.

Aeroflot, the Soviet Union's national airline is the world's largest — an extraordinarily diverse enterprise flying to some 5,000 locations in the Soviet Union and to 70 countries, hauling freight as well as passengers.

But that monumental snafu at Domadedovo and similar episodes encountered regularly by Russian and foreign travellers show that Aeroflot's shortcomings, in keeping with its size, are big ones.

The problems are less evident on the main international runs, such as the flights to Washington and New York, where Aeroflot competes in terms of reliabailty and safety, if not really in comfort, with other major carriers. Aeroflot has plush sales offices and a sizeable advertising budget, and it benefits from the general efficiency of Western airports in check-in and baggage-handling.

Inside the country the situation is very different. Every fifth passenger can expect to depart late, a Ministry of Civil Aviation traffic administrator conceded to a Soviet interviewer. In a two-month period at Donladedovo, the biggest and newest airport serving Moscow, 245,000 passengers were delayed for reasons other than poor weather.

In many places, flights are routinely overbooked. Some dismayed passengers are left behind at the ramp after their bags already have been processed. This leads to an unseemly scramble for seats by travelers rushing to get on board first. On the other hand, many planes are listed as full when seats actually are vacant. Flight cancellations at the last minute also are common.

A few weeks after the Khabarovsk mess, a flight bound for another remote Far East region from Domadedovo was called off at check-in time because the aircraft was only half full. The passengers waited overnight and into the evening the next day. When the flight finally was announced, many of the weary travellers were asleep and missed the departure.

Aeroflot then insisted that they pay a 25 per cent penalty for not having shown up before tickets would be reissued.

With the Olympics scheduled for Moscow in 1980, the Soviets finally have decided to expand shabby Sheremetyevo to accommodate 1,500 passengers an hour — at a guess, three or four times more than are handled now. Contracts are pending with a West Berlin company.

Crown Corp. To Pay Taxes

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec revenue department expects to collect about $5 million in sales taxes from Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. (AECL) as a result of a recent court decision.

Judge Jacques Tisseur of provincial court held that the Crown corporation must pay provincial sales tax on materials used to build its atomic power plant in Gentilly, on the south shore of the St. Lawrence about 75 miles from here.

Sales tax must also be paid on heavy water used by the plant's reactor, Judge Tisseur said in his Oct. 18 decision.

He rejected AECL's argument that the nature of its contracts with Hydro-Quebec freed it from obligation to pay the sales tax.

City History Popular

TORONTO (CP) — The city archives, almost hidden in the basement of city hall, are being discovered by an increasing number of persons, not all of them research scholars or students.

City archivist James Scott says many persons find they can use the archives to research the history of their home, trace their family tree or find out what their neighborhood was like 100 years ago.

Mr. Scott, who came to Toronto from England in 1966 as an assistant archivist, said in an interview that many Canadians have become more interested in history since the 1967 Centennial Year.

"Bicentennial observances in the United States also heightened an interest in history on this side of the border since a great deal of U.S. history is tied up with Canadian history," he said.

There are, of course, other uses for the archives.

When the silver trowel used in laying the cornerstone of the city's old city hall was stolen last February, Mr. James consulted the city treasurer's report for 1891 and was able to tell police its exact purchase price.

The trowel—bought for $85—is priceless today, as are many items in the archives, he said.

There are council minutes and municipal papers dating back to 1834 when Toronto became a city, collections of photographs, musty police-station duty books, paintings and a 1792 map of Toronto harbor. For the serious researcher, the old assessment rolls provide a wealth of historical data.

What makes the archives an especially exciting place is the "detective work, the digging, the research," Mr. James said.

"Two or three times a year we get a letter from a solicitor from out of town, maybe in England, trying to trace somebody who had been left some money."

A U.S. man wrote to Mr. James recently asking whether a street in Toronto had been named after his grandfather.

"By checking through the records in the archives, we were able to discover that it was not," he said. "But at least we were able to settle this matter for the man."

Skill Is Knowing Hazards

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Defensive driving does not promise to transform a poor driver into an excellent one, but taking the course is an effective way of improving skills or preapring for a driving test.

Ed Kisinger, a city driver trainer and safety supervisor, highly commends the concepts of the defensive driving course sponsored by the Alberta Safety Council.

He says defensive drving is recognizing hazards, looking well ahead, even past the vehicle ahead of you, and getting the "big picture." It is knowing how to drive in adverse weather conditions, and most of all, it is looking out for the other guy.

The course teaches drivers how to avoid intersection accidents and head-on collisions, how to recover from pavement dropoffs when the front tire wanders off the road, how to avoid other vehicles and pedestrians, how to drive on expressways and how to cross railway crossings.

Mr. Kisinger, an instructor in the regularly-held fall and winter courses, says when testing future drivers he watches for such things as the driver looking both ways before proceeding through a green light and remembering the two-second following rule taught in the defensive driving course.

By picking a fixed point even with the lead vehicle, the following driver counts off two seconds. If he reaches the point in less than two seconds, he is following too closely.

Positive driving techniques he looks for when testing would-be drivers include taking the foot off the gas pedal and poising it over the brake at intersections and pumping the brake while going downhill rather than changing gears.

Mr. Kisinger is a strong advocate of the course which he believes reduces accidents.

GARDENING

Consider an Allotment Plot

The pleasures of garden-fresh vegetables are no longer limited to the home owner with a private piece of property attached to the home. Readers of this column will have noticed references throughout the year to the care and cultivation of allotment gardens, plots of ground which may be rented annually by persons without a suitable place for growing vegetables.

The first plots in British Columbia were laid out and cultivated in Greater Victoria under the guidance of the provincial government in April, 1974.

Without going into all details of the scheme at this time, it can be mentioned that each November, registrations for use of allotment gardens are made for the following 12 months. Many gardeners like to keep the same plot for reasons such as winter vegetables still growing and soil improvement which has been done through the current and past years.

However, each year a number of plots become vacant from various causes, and so opportunities for new gardeners occur.

This month, plots 25 by 50 feet will be available for new registrants at each allotment site. While I can provide some information details, registrations must be made through the horticultural branch of the department of agriculture. Phone 387-5121.

The work entailed in raising vegetables through the whole season is no easier on the plot than on a comparable plot attached to your dwelling. It must be planned for your available time, but that it is possible has been proved by scores of enthusiastic people who are regularly occupied all day with their work in office, store, home, outdoors — in fact, every type of occupation.

The few tools needed must be transported each way each time work is to be done. Some manage this on a bicycle, but car parking is provided on the sites.

Water is provided for each plot. Standpipes are within reach of each plot. Providing garden hose or watering can is the responsibility of each plot holder.

Gardening is strenuous at times, and perhaps tiring for some, but the over-all benefits of working outdoors with others at the same tasks have a therapeutic advantage hard to define but real enough to be important in today's life. You have a different feeling to that when laboring alone in a home backyard when you see neighbors each side lolling on patios with frosty glasses.

Out on the plot, problems of growing are similar and the helpful information provided by the on-site plot organizer helps the new gardeners to make satisfactory progress and achieve success.

With an allotment signed for now you have the chance next year of winter crops of brussels sprouts, kale, leeks, parsnips and on some sites you may have tender salad greens, as you would in a sheltered garden spot at home if you had the space.

Give the idea some thought. Decide whether you will take on a 25 by 50-foot plot, undertaking to cultivate it throughout the season so that it is a paying proposition to you in money saved and a pleasure for others to see as part of the allotment scheme.

DUNCAN BOATLAND

TURKEY LOVERS

"Boatlands" first annual pre-Christmas TURKEY sale!

Does the memory of your Thanksgiving TURKEY still linger fondly on the taste buds of your mind. Do you wish you didn't have to wait until Christmas to experience that feeling again.

Then Boatland can help you now!

Each of our stores in Victoria, Duncan, Courtenay, and Campbell River, has a number of boating trade-ins which are kiddingly referred to in the boating business as TURKEYS. Old boats and wooden boats, boat motor and trailer packages where the engine needs an overhaul or the boat needs fibreglass work.

We want them gone now, and we're practically giving them away. No reasonable offers refused. Some of our utility grade TURKEYS will go for as little as 50c per pound.

So if you are interested in a TURKEY and don't mind a little do-it-yourself fix-up work over the winter, come in and see us at your local Boatland store before the Christmas rush.

P.D. 1 free real TURKEY voucher to each customer who purchases a Boatland TURKEY before Nov. 30th.

Protection Is. Residents Isolated as Ferry Halts

By PAUL NICOLSON
Times Staff

PROTECTION ISLAND — School children unable to get to classes in nearby Nanaimo aren't the only ones affected by the halt this week in ferry service. Elderly without boats can't get food.

Duggan, a diabetic, lives with his 60-year-old wife on the island. They have no boat of their own and depend on the ferry for food and transportation.

"There's no store and there's no doctor here. I can't see all this hullaballoo over wanting a schoolhouse. An education without a full stomach isn't worth a damn," the pensioner said today.

The Protection Island ferry servicing 150 island resident, has been operated for the past five years by Robert Armstrong, of Leeshore Resorts, but it has been a money-losing proposition.

All his efforts to get subsidies failed, so to dramatize his plight, Armstrong this week stopped running the ferry to Nanaimo, about three-quarters of a mile across the bay.

About 18 students were suddenly without their regular transportation to schools in Nanaimo.

Most of the parents have their own boats and could have arranged a boat pool, Armstrong said, but they decided to keep their children out of school in an effort to have the school board place a portable classroom on the island for elementary instruction.

Most secondary students have managed to get to high schools in Nanaimo this week.

Nanaimo city council decided to support the parents' drive for a school on the island, and asked the provincial government to subsidize the ferry.

But Highways Minister Alex Fraser said a subsidy would be a precedent-setting move because Protection Island is within Nanaimo city limits.

Armstrong feels the ferry should be part of the city's bus transit system, and possibly subsidized that way.

Eight-year Island resident Keith MacIntyre said that Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney "will have to sit on the fence" in dealing with subsidies because Ney owns two summer homes on the island.

Armstrong's main problem is insurance. The annual premium of $1,800 on his ferry quadrupled this year. "I can get insurance, I just can't handle the premiums," he said.

A delegation of parents will take thier case for an island school to a committee meeting of the Nanaimo school board later today.

The committee's recommendations will be brought forward at a later board meeting.

But school or not, it won't solve Duggan's problem. He needs the ferry service for a lifeline to the main Island.

"There's older people than me on the island," he said, "and they don't have their own boats, either."

There's another problem Duggan pointed out, that affect even those with their own boats, They bay is at the mouth of two rivers, including the Nanaimo River. There is a lot of fresh water, pouring into the bay and in the winter it has a tendency to freeze.

"In the winter, they sometimes have to use a tug to break the ice in front of the ferry," he said.

Controllers Conciliated

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has promised some legislative changes in an attempt to get French-speaking air traffic controllers to participate in technical studies on the touchy issue of French air communications in Quebec airspace.

Transport Minister Otto Lang said Tuesday in a letter to l'Association des Gens de l'Air du Quebec Tuesday that the government is ready to change the Public Service Staff Relations Act to meet some demands by the Quebec group.

The changes would, in effect, allow the French-speaking controllers to protest actions by the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and perhaps gain permission to set up their own union. Some Quebec controllers have said they want a separate union.

The proposal was among a number of conciliatory statements made by Lang in a letter which called on the Gens de l'Air to take part in the bilingual air traffic control studies.

The letter was replying to conditions laid down by the Gens de l'Air in late September before participating in the studies.

The bilingual air traffic control issue led to a series of walkouts during the summer by CATCA and Canadian Air Line Pilots Association members. The two groups were protesting the government policy of gradually extending the use of French in Quebec airspace.

Lang said in September the simulator tests were being delayed because the Gens de l'Air was refusing to participate. In late September, the Gens de l'Air listed 16 conditions for taking part.

One of them was that the federal government would change the Public Service Staff Relations Act if a separate French-speaking controllers union could not be certified under existing law. The Gens de l'Air said a separate union should be allowed on grounds the CATCA, the national union, praetised linguistic discrimination against its French-speaking members.

Lang said in his letter that under the government's proposed changes, the Public Service Staff Relations Board will be allowed to decertify a bargaining agent for language discrimination.

TWO YOUTHS MISSING IN 17-FOOT BOAT

A concentrated air and marine search was on today for two Richmond youths missing in a speedboat en route from the Gulf Islands to the Mosquito Creek Marina in North Vancouver.

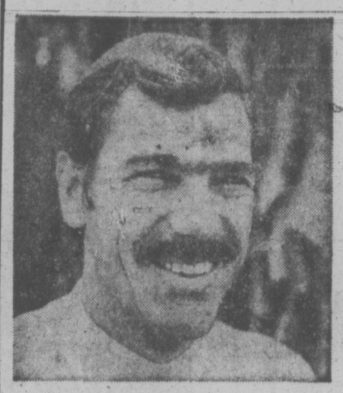
Missing are Kelly Mould and John McDougal, both 16.

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said the youths were last spotted by Doug Gordon, father of Mould, as he flew over the craft in his private plane.

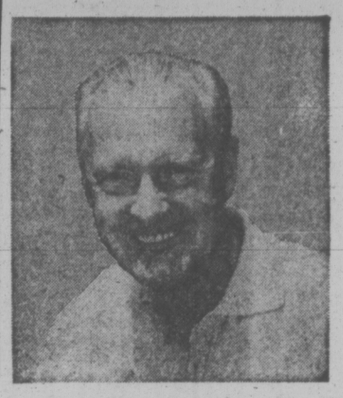
The 17-foot speedboat, capable of 50 knots, was spotted by Gordon at 4:15 p.m. Tuesday five miles northeast of Porlier Pass.

Gordon was in one of two private planes that joined in the aerial sweep today.

Also taking part in the search were the Vancouver-based Canadian coast guard cutters Mallard and Moorhen, the coast guard hovercraft from Vancouver and a Labrador helicopter from CFB Comox.



"I need a steady stream of customers for my service business."



"I need one buyer. I'm retiring and want to sell my business"

One-Room School Keeps Modern

MEDICINE HAT, Alta. (CP) — Every Friday afternoon is story-telling time in a little one-room school tucked away in the Cypress Hills of southeastern Alberta.

Lebanon country school, with its scarred old upright piano and chalky blackboards, is not like old one-room country schools, says Helen Sturm, the schools' teacher, part-time janitor and nurse.

It has lights, power, water, real toilets and TV. But there are some old-fashioned aspects.

Eight students, ranging in age from six to 12 in Grades 1 through 6, sit lined against the west wall windows.

In winter snowstorms, Mrs. Strum has had to tie her students behind her with a rope to ensure none are lost on the way from the school to her house trailer 60 feet away.

In a mixture between the old and new, the eight students troop in each day at 8:30 to go about their work, each at his own level.

Mrs. Strum, who has been teaching for 22 years, said a flexible discipline, with definite limits of permissibility, is the only way six grades can be taught in the same room.

"It's student training more than teacher training," she said.

Each student knows the work that has to be done in one day and unless the day's work isn't finished, there's never any homework.

Every morning, the six girls and two boys stand beside their wooden desks, face the flag and belt out all three verses of O Canada.

Mrs. Strum takes pride in that.

She tells the story of a class trip to Medicine Hat to hear a Little Symphony performance. The concert opened with O Canada. Some city students, sitting directly behind the little Lebanon group failed to stand for the national anthem.

"If I had't held little Ricky back, he would have stood them up in a hurry," Mrs. Strum said.

Mrs. Strum began her career at 17 in a one-room school of 32 pupils, where four lanky senior students were older than she was.

"So I was well broken in."

Living in a trailer beside the school which is miles from the nearest neighbors hasn't been lonely, Mrs Strum said.

In the five years that she has been teaching at Lebanon, she has spent her night completing correspondence courses toward her bachelor of education degree.

Then she married the school bus driver.

RAINMAKER SUES U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. judge must decide whether the CIA and the Pentagon infringed on a Canadian meteorologist's rainmaking process during the Vietnam War.

Bernard Power, a professional meteorologist and president of Weather Engineer Corp. of Canada, Ltd., sued the U.S. government four years ago and the trial began Sept. 22 in the U.S. Court of Claims. Arguments ended Friday.

Judge Joseph Colaianni is expected to rule in about 10 days on the first part of the two-section case — the validity of Power's patent. If it is valid, another hearing will be needed to decide if U.S. government agencies infringed it.

Power charged he was the first to devise a container that could be dropped from an aircraft, explode in a cloud, and make rain. His Weathercord is a mixture of explosive and silver iodide to "nucleate" the ice phase in supercooled clouds, causing snow that then falls as rain.

Power said his system had proved very successful in peaceful rainmaking operations in Iran and elsewhere.

The scientist applied for U.S. patents on the Weathercord device Jan. 9, 1967, and the following day informed White House aids of the application but never heard anything further from them or any other government agency. He claimed his "Hardware" had been taken over without permission by U.S. agencies.

Planes Plague Caracas

CARACAS (AP) — Venezuelans are taking off in everything from single-engine planes to executive twin-jets — bringing headaches to civil aviation officials concerned with the safety of the country's skies.

This oil-wealthy country counts nearly 5,000 pilots among its 12 million inhabitants and registered aircraft total some 2,000, including 1,500 private planes.

Despite the soaring cost of new and used planes, civil aeronautics officials say the number of private planes is growing by an average of nearly one a day as more companies and wealthier private citizens discover the advantages of flying for business and pleasure.

Aviation authorities hampered by lack of funds and outdated equipment, are struggling to keep up with internal air traffic that increased by nearly 28 per cent last year and with international traffic, up by 13 per cent.

A sombre note has been added by a series of private plane crashes that killed 20 per cent in the April-June period.

Ten died aboard a private air-ferry that plunged into the jungle of Bolivar state on a flight to an isolated diamond mining camp. Seven were killed when their small plane slammed into a mountain in the southwestern state of Barinas.

The only survivors of the series of accidents were four men aboard a single-engine plane that made a forced landing after the pilot became lost and strayed across the Colombian border opposite Venezuela's Amazon Territory.

Although unhurt, the four nearly perished in an 11-day trek on foot and by raft through jungle, swamp and savannah before being rescued by Indians who at first fled, thinking the survivors were bandits.

The accidents aroused a storm of criticism in the press and from some pilots, largely directed at the department of civil aviation (DAC).

The agency was accused of inadequate control of licensing of pilots and quality of airport maintenance and failure to provide adequate electronic airport and flying aids, particularly in sparsely-populated southern Venezuela.

Brig. Gen. Edgard Mier y Teran, DAC director, said, "We find ourselves in the era of Napoleon while the traffic we must deal with has grown unlike that of any other nation."

His department has been hampered the general said, by control towers with old equipment, some of which "is 10 to 20 years old and either hasn't received the servicing it requires or replacement parts are simply not available."

34 Die in Buses

JAKARTA (AFP) — Thirty-four passengers were killed and 25 others severely injured when a tourist bus collided with a minibus in Bogor, south of Jakarta.

Trudeau Patches Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau today patched the holes in his cabinet created by the departure of James Richardson, bringing Andre Ouellet back from the political wilderness and moving Barney Danson to defence.

At the same time he brought into the cabinet Joseph Guay, 61-year-old French MP from the Winnipeg suburb of St. Boniface. Richardson resigned from the defence portfolio last month to protest the government's language policy.

On Tuesday Pierre Juneau, former chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission and a defeated Liveral candidate in a byelection last year, was appointed chairman of the National Capital Commission.

Officials said he will receive a deputy minister level salary as NCC chairman, probably about $50,000 a year. He was in the deputy minister's pay range in the adviser's job. Deputies are paid $40,000 to $60,000 a year.

The addition of Guay brings the cabinet to 32 persons, the largest since Confederation.

Ouellet, 37-year-old Quebec MP who has spent almost eight months in exile on the Liberal backbenches after being convicted of contempt of court in the so-called judges affair, will take over the urban affairs portfolio being vacated by Danson. It will be his third cabinet posting, following consumer affairs and postmaster gentral.

Danson, 55, takes over a portfolio he has sought since entering Parliament as MP for York North 1968. He has been acting minister since Richardson resigned two weeks ago.

Guay, like Ouellet told only Tutsday night that he was going into the cabinet, will continue his responsibilities of government whip. Trudeau gave no indication of what other work he has in the cabinet.

FORD CONGRATULATES VICTOR

Carter Wins in a Squeaker, Democrats Control Congress

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — In one of the toughest presidential fights in U.S. history, Democrat Jimmy Carter swept out of the South to capture the White House early today.

Only three states were still undeclared — Maine, Oregon and Ohio. Ford led in Maine and Oregon and Ohio was a toss-up.

Both houses of Congress remained solidly Democratic.

His wife, Betty, read his congratulatory telegram to Carter.

"Dear Jimmy," the telegram said. "It is apparent now that you won a long and intense struggle for the presidency.

"I congratulate you on your victory. As one who has been honored to serve the people of this great land—both in Congress and as president—I believe that we must now put the divisions of the capaign behind us and unite the country once again . . ."

Carter claimed victory for himself and running-mate Walter Mondale during an emotional, early-morning appearance at an Atlanta convention centre before thousands of supporters.

"I'm not afraid to take on the responsibilities of president of the United States," he said, "because my strength comes from you, the American people."

Carter paid tribute to Ford as the "toughest and most formidable opponent anybody could possibly have."

At one point, Carter's eyes filled with tears and he had to turn to his wife Rosalynn before he could continue speaking.

Carter at this point had a total of 272 electoral votes — two more than necessary to assure him of victory as the 39th president of the United States.

Ford held 231 electoral votes and was leading in Maine and Oregon, which could throw another 10 into his column.

There were another 25 at stake in Ohio. If Ford took them all, he would have 266 but he still would not have enough to win.

However, the Ford camp got a court order to impound New York state's voting machines, charging voting "irregularities" in the state. New York has 41 electoral votes, captured by Carter.

Trucks were dispatched to pick up all of the state's 25,000 voting machines.

The highly unusual action — believed to be a first in New York state — was ordered after representatives of Republic officials alleged that irregularities had occurred in Tuesday's election.

With 98 per cent of the state's vote counted, Carter led Ford by about 250,000 votes and was running four percentage points ahead — 52 to 48.

That lead was considered far more than could possibly be needed to survive any changes in the state's vote total as a result of a recount.

However, there was confusion over the status of absentee ballots in the state.

A Hesitant Mandate

By FRANK RUTTER
(An interpretive report from the Times Washington bureau chief)

WASHINGTON — Americans have taken a chance on change, voting in moderate numbers and by narrow margins in many states, to elect Jimmy Carter as their 39th president.

It was a hesitant mandate, outside the Georgia peanut merchant's native South, with many voters deciding only at the last moment to take that chance.

Incumbent President Gerald Ford had turned a runaway into a race, almost overtaking the enourmous lead Carter took into the campaign three months ago, but falling a few thousand votes short in the big states of the industria Northeast and Midwest.

There were, and still are, big states of the industrial where he will take the coungry.

Those doubts showed in the excruciatingly close results in states like Ohio, Illinois, Pennsylvania and New York, even in Ford's home ground, Michigan.

The result may be that Carter will be a more cautious president than his campaign rhetoric indicated.

He has a fragile mandate, reflective of the unease, dissatisfaction, disillusionment, the doubts and fears of the country.

The closeness of the race brought out more voters than had been expected, although the turnout was no more than moderate and nowhere near the record that enthusiastic party workers were yelling about before the polls closed.

It was a campaign in which neither candidate impressed voters as inspirational. But they decided to fake a gamble.

It comes down to a question of trying something new, was how California Governor Edmund Brown put it.

But if Carter tries anything too new, he might find he is not so popular.

He isn't anyway, having been elected by about one-quarter of the total voting-age population.

He has promised one major new social program — national health insurance. But he hedged his promise by say-

Smith Goes Home

GENEVA (UPI) — Rhodesian Premier Ian Smith quit the Geneva conference on black majority rule for Rhodesia today saying he relies on the United States to prevent "Communist aggression" in southern Africa.

After an informal meeting with the four black nationalist leaders at the conference and British chairman Ivor Richard, Smith said no progress had been made since talks began Oct. 28 and he was "tired of twiddling my thumbs."

Rhodesian officials said they doubt Smith would return to the Geneva conference table.

Asked if he thought Jimmy Carter's election to the U.S. presidency would have any effect on the conference, Smith said:

"No, I don't believe the results of the American election will have any effect on this at all. My belief is that the new administration will be happy to see the work which has already started continue.

"I believe they are dedicated to try to bring peace to southern Africa and avoid Communist aggression in that part of the world."

Smith again insisted he is sticking to U.S. proposals for Rhodesia drawn up in September by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger which call for a peaceful change to black majority rule within two years.

"We've made no progress," Smith said, appearing tired and irritable. "When I'm satisfied there's something to come back to, I'll come back."

Meanwhile, Rhodesia announced today the completion of a three-day anti-guerrilla drive into neighboring Mozambique in an operation that destroyed more than 50 tons of weapons.

$10,000 Fraud Fine

WINNIPEG (CP) — Provincial Judge Robert Trudel Tuesday fined a Winnipeg man a total of $10,000 in connection with the rolling back of automobile odometers.

Bruno Jack Daudrich, 29, pleaded guilty to 46 counts of fraud. Court was told he participated in a ring that purchased cars in Quebec and rolled back the odometers before re-selling them in Manitoba.

He was one of 24 persons arrested in Winnipeg last July after a nation-wide RCMP investigation of rollbacks of used car odometers.

Three of the others arrested pleaded guilty to one count each of fraud and were each given six-month conditional discharges.

A fourth pleaded guilty to two counts of fraud and was given a two-year suspended sentence.

The cases against the other 19 persons are still pending.

Two-Week Refit Job Lost In Yarrows Wage Dispute

The U.S. container ship Sealand McLean, which was to have docked at Yarrows shipyard today for a two-week refit, has been diverted because of unsettled labor conditions at Yarrows and Burrard shipyard in North Vancouver.

Yarrows general manager Don Challinor said between 200 and 250 men would have been employed on the Sealand McLean project.

The owners of the ship's line decided to divert the Sealand McLean on being informed by Yarrows of a strike vote to take place on Monday in both yards.

Of the 24 unions belonging to the Joint Shipyard Conference, 18 have rejected the Burrard-Yarrows' latest contract offer while six voted in favor.

"They changed all their plans and stayed on the run," Challinor said. "They're looking around and trying to decide what they're going to do."

Conference president Jim McAvoy was out-of-town today and could not be reached for comment on the loss of the Sealand McLean job. Yarrows has a contract involving work on several of the Sealand line vessels.

Walt Frederikson, business agent for the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers, however, said he does not believe it would mean the loss of Sealand business to the Victoria shipyard.

"I understand they (the ship) are going to make another trip until they see what happens on this vote business," he said." They have much the same problems in the United States."

GOV'T TO FILL NORTHLAND VOID

The B.C. government has stepped in at the last minute to provide passenger and mail service to north coastal communities left isolated by the shutdown of Northland Navigation.

Transport Minister Jack Davis said today the provincial and federal governments have come up with a 50-50 cost-sharing arrangement which should provide adequate service.

The service will cost B.C. and the federal government about $400,000 a year each, but B.C. will keep passenger fares collected on the run. The fare structure has not been set yet but Davis said it was possible that about $200,000 a year could be collected.

Under the agreement, the B.C. Ferries Queen of Prince Rupert will stop at Ocean Falls twice a week on its trips between Kelsey Bay and Prince Rupert.

In addition, the B.C. Steamship Company has leased a high speed 80-foot motor launch — the Lumba Lumba — from Rivtow Straits which will provide passenger and mail service to the smaller communities previously served by Northland.

Quebec Italians Threaten Boycott of Grits

MONTREAL (CP) — The Italian-Canadian Education Council said Tuesday night it will begin organzing a boycott this weekend against Liberal candidates in the Nov. 15 Quebec election unless Premier Robert Bourassa's government comes up with "solutions, not promises" on the explosive language issue.

Council President Angelo Montini said in an interview he is certain that not only Italians but Greeks, Portuguese and other minorities whose children are affected by the Official Language Act will support the boycott.

Immigant voters are significant in a dozen central and north-end Montreal ridings, including Bourassa's riding of Mercier, which he won by a margin of less than 3,000 votes in 1973. About 6,500 of the 36,000 voters in Mercier are new Canadians.

The council hasn't recommended an alternative to the Liberals but the vote conceivably could shift to the Union Nationale, which has promised to bring back freedom of choice in the language of education.

The Union Nationale appeared at mid-campaign to be gaining strength in western Montreal ridings where English-speaking residents also are at odds with the language law passed by the Bourassa government in 1974.

At dissolution Oct. 18, Liberals held 96 seats in the Quebec national assembly, the Parti Quebecois six, the Union Nationale one, Creditistes one, Parti National Populaire two and independents two. Two seats were vacant.

At a news conference Tuesday following the Italian-Canadian Council's initial boycott threat, Education Minister Jean Bienvenue said he would urge a new Liberal government to end formal testing of immigrant children for proficiency in English.

The children now must pass tests to get into an English-language school. Bienvenue said "sufficient knowledge of English" would remain a condition of entry but interviews rather than tests might be used to determine knowledge.

Children who already had brothers and sisters in English-language schools would not have to take the tests, Bienvenue said. Furthermore, French-language schools would have to introduce English courses in grade three in future.

"We want a clear position on the language issue," Montini said. "I would be satisfied if Bourassa decided to send all immigrants to French schools, without any exception."

Clark Won't Snitch on Tories If They Tell Him of Conflicts

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Joe Clark said Tuesday he will attempt to keep secret any conflict-of-interest cases that might involve Conservative MPs.

He confirmed he has asked his MPs to tell him on a confidential basis if they have had business dealings with the government that might embarass the party.

He added he does not intend to make such information public.

"My interest is in being informed myself," Clark said. He will discuss any conflict-of-interest situation with the MP involved to see it does not happen again.

Clark's comments followed disclosures that Conservative MP Peter Bawden (Calgary South) has been involved in business deals with the Liberal government since he was elected in 1972.

After Clark learned of the deals, he wrote a confidential letter to his MPs asking them to outline involvement they might have in companies which have significant amounts of business with the government.

In the letter—a copy of which was obtained by The Canadian Press — Clark said he was asking for the information because "we probably can assume that the government is scanning all its files and records for material of possible embarrassment to us."

He asked his MPs to tell him of any connections which the government "might be tempted to use against us in one way or another" simply as preventive medicine.

Earlier in the Commons, New Democrat House Leader Stanley Knowles unsuccessfully attempted to gain House approval for a motion that would have referred the Bawden deals to a committee for investigation.

Bawden told the House on Monday that Emden Ltd., a company in which he is sole shareholders, had sold an airplane to the RCMP for $120,000 and a trade-in.

He said another Bawden company — Peter Bawden Drilling Services Ltd. — sold an airplane in 1973 to the transport department for $280,000.

Emden also owns a hangar at Calgary International Airport which has a lease with the transport department. And that company has a subsidiary — Business Flights Ltd. — providing fuelling service and hangars to government and other planes.

Clark said he has set up a small committee headed by Conservative Douglas Neal (Moose Jaw) to draw up some conflict-of-interest guides for MPs.

WORKER DEATHS' PROBE PROMISED

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bette Stephenson agreed Tuesday to look into a recent series of deaths among workers at a Toronto asbestos pipe plant.

Opposition Leader Stephen Lewis raised the question in the legislature, saying five long-time employees of the Johns-Manville Ltd., plant have died of lung and stomach cancer within the last two months.

He said X-rays of the workers in 1975 and 1976 did not show the severity of their conditions and asked Dr. Stephenson whether the ministry had more accurate testing methods.

The minister said the matter had not been brought to her attention and promised to look into it.

Lewis said outside the legislature that the workers were declared fit by Workmen's Compensation Board doctors in June but were having parts of their lungs and stomachs removed in August.

Charlie Neilson, president of the United Chemical Workers local at the Johns-Manville plant, said in an interview the situation with veteran employees is desperate and board physicians are doing a poor job of diagnosis.

Lewis said he is also concerned about a pattern of cancers that is developing in workers at the plant.

Clark Against Petro-Canada

OTTAWA (FP) — Oppositon Leader Joe Clark says a Progressive Conservative government would move to "wind down" PetroCanada, the federal petroleum company established by the ruling Liberals during the minority government days when the New Democratic Party held sway.

In an interview, Clark explained that the party policy to attempt to sell PetroCanada, either in whole or in pieces, to industry is part of a broader PC policy of trying wherever posible to minimize the proportioon of Gross National Product spent by government.

With PetroCanada, another over-riding reason is Clark's long-time concern that the federal government should not normally play both the umpire and the player, as it is so obviously doing now in the oil and gas industry. Such a conflict only distorts the federal regulatory role.

In this regard, he rejected the suggestion that he was reflecting the outspoken views of many Calgary oilmen, who have resented PetroCanada as a government intrusion into an industry better left to industry.

A major bone of contention among oil companies is the proposed preferential treatment to be given PetroCanada in the federally-controlled North, with regard to acquisiton of Crown lands and wth regard to regulaitons to give PetroCanada a 25 per cent interest in certain oil and gas plays, without Petro Canada having to share in past exploration costs.

MANITOBA TO TEST AIB PACT

WINNIPEG (CP) — Attorney-General Howard Pawley says the Manitoba government will ask the Supreme Court of Canada to rule on the validity of the province's anti-inflation agreement with Ottawa.

Pawley said Tuesday the province has agreed to a request by the Manitoba Government Employees Association (MGEA) to bypass the Manitoba Court of Appeal.

Last month, the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench rejected the MGEA's motion to have the agreement declared invalid.

Pawley said the government's decision to go straight to the supreme court was made to minimize costs as well as time.

"There is no reason to deal with it at the court of appeal — it's going to end up at the supreme court anyway," he said.

Rubbish More Proper —Danson

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson gently chided a government information officer Tuesday for describing statements by Conservative MP Tom Cossitt as "a lot of crap."

"In this particular case, a more proper word might have been rubbish," Danson said in a written reply to a question by Cossitt.

Dave McIntosh, adviser on communication policy for the National Capital Commission (NCC), appeared on national television last September and said statement made by Cossitt on the prime minister's summer home located on NCC territory was "a lot of crap."

Whelan Cool To Surtaxes On Food

OTTAWA (CP) — A surtax imposed on food imports from the western United States would be of little help to producer incomes in British Columbia, says Argiculture Minister Eugene Whelan.

Whelan made the comment Tuesday when asked about the likelihood of legislation to block potato imports from the U.S. into B.C.

"A surtax wouldn't guarantee them a thing and they know it," he said. "We think the producers are getting a fair deal through the stablization plan and that this particular situation will resolve itself."

The B.C. growers asked for a surtax last summer. They complained that low-priced potatoes imported from Washington, Oregon and Idaho were under-mining the domestic market and depressing prices paid to producers.

70% Interest Legal?

OTTAWA (CP) — Interest rates between 70 per cent and 100 per cent could be legal under a consumer credit bill designed to curb loan-sharking, Liberal and Progressive Conservative MPs said Tuesday.

Herb Gray (L-Windsor-West) told the Commons he had learned the government was considering "a rate of at least 70 per cent per annum."

Ron Huntington (PC-Capilano) said he understood the interest rate allowed by the bill would be seven times the prime interest rate, currently 10½ per cent.

The Commons was debating legislation to protect consumers borrowing money. It would also set a criminal interest rate, still undecided, which would result in fines of up to $10,000 and jail terms between two and five years for every count if exceeded by lenders.

Arnold Peters (NDP-Timiskaming) said an interest rate above 10 per cent was usury and should be considered loan-sharking.

Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott said outside the Commons that the minimum 70 per cent criminal rate "is Mr. Gray's statement, not mine."

The minister said that he too considered 70 per cent too high a ceiling. He stressed that the rate would be decided in government regulation after discussion with other MPs and witnesses at parliamentary committee hearings after the debate.

Criminal interest would also apply to discounting at excessive rates cheques for income tax refunds, welfare or other government payments.

A consumer affairs official said a formula setting the criminal interest rate at seven times the prime interest rate was considered by the department when the bill was being drafted. But the formula never made it into the final bill.

Some officials think a multiplier is too crude and could lead to the conviction of legitimate lenders if the prime interest rate goes down, say, to six per cent.

Peter Mueller . . . mental well-being too

Mr. Atlas!

. . . Move Over for Mr. Mueller

Peter is one of only two competing body builders living here and he'd like to be where the action is. And what more action could there be, indeed, for musclemen than posing in the Mr. Canada and Mr. Universe contests at the same time!

But he can't afford it and sponsors are hard to come by so Peter, a mechanic who works for himself, will stay here and lift a few cars up and down instead.

Let's be serious, though, for Peter Mueller, unlike most people in Canada, is very serious about body building. He trains religiously for two hours every evening, lifting weights and doing exercises in the YM-YWCA gym. And he dreams one day of becoming Mr. Universe.

His idol is the legendary musclebound Arnold Schwarzenegger, who hailed from the Austrian town of Graz where Peter was born and who has just retired from competition after winning the Mr. Olympia crown six times and the Mr. Universe title five times.

There are one or two other young men doing body building at the Y and a couple working out in a gym in Langford but they are just beginners and aren't ready for competition. And Mueller complains there isn't much in Victoria to help them get ready — "no instructors, nothing."

Right now, only Peter and his friend Dick Reid, a 27-year-old Victoria-born bulldozer driver, compete. Each year they enter contests like Mr. B.C. Coast, which Peter has won, Mr. B.C., which Dick has won, Mr. Pacific Coast in either Seattle or Portland, and Mr. Canada is the venue is near enough.

Of course, Mr. Canada is the big one for Canadian body builders as the winners of each of the three different height divisions get an all-expenses-paid trip to the Mr. Universe contest. Last year, that one was in South Africa and Victoria's two musclemen tried hard in the Mr. Canada contest in Vancouver to earn the right to represent their country.

Dick was third in his class (medium height) and Peter, after placing fourth for three years in a row in his class (tall), failed to place.

But Peter won't think of giving it up.

"You have to diet strictly and train hard," he says. "I don't eat any garbage foods, no potatoes or white bread, and I sweat for a couple of hours at the end of each working day and sometimes I say what's it all for? But I stick with it and think maybe I'll go somewhere. Maybe in two or three years I'll win Mr. Canada and go on to Mr. Universe, who knows."

But what makes men take this kind of thing up in the first place?

"Well, when I was a boy in Austria, I used to look at the pictures of the strong men in the magazines and I thought they looked good," Peter explains. "I learned and then taught judo and took up body building when I came to Canada in 1968."

Now aged 30, the six-foot one-inch Mueller weighs 220 pounds and when he's competing has a 51-inch chest and a 30-inch waist.

"I feel much better for it," he says. "I'm much stronger and healthier, you wouldn't believe it."

Raised on a farm and already possessing a solid body, Dick Reid started body building basically to improve his physical build. And he has done just that. At five-foot seven and-a-half inches, he now weighs 175 pounds and has a 48-inch chest and a 27-inch waist.

Dick has been into body building for more than eight years but says he isn't a competitive person.

"Peter prods me into it every time a contest comes round," he says with a grin. "I go along and I really enjoy it."

"There's a really close friendship between the guys and it's more like a learning experience than a competition," says Reid, who is single.

And there's none of the cut-throat cattiness usually associated with women's beauty contests.

"A guy will tell you how to improve your performance an hour before you're going to be competing against him," Dick says.

"But to me, it's a personal thing," he says wistfully. "It's a mental well-being from knowing I'm in good shape."

Peter, who is married and has one small child, loves the contests. His wife Rini does too and she goes to watch all those that are not too far away.

"Each time, there is prejudging in the morning and the afternoon and then there is the show for the public at night," he says.

"You just pose and you show your muscles," Peter explains. "Everyone has his own music — whatever he wants to pose to — and you probably do 10 or 12 poses and that's it. They judge you on size, definition and symmetry."

A big crowd packed the Queen Elizabeth Theatre in Vancouver for last year's Mr. Canada contest but Peter says the following in America is far greater.

"I n Canada, if somebody sees you they say look at that musclehead and all that rubbish, but it's not like that in the States.

"People love to see a beautiful woman and it's the same with the guys, too — a fat slop doesn't look so good on the screen as Steve Reeves does."

Reeves, of course, star of several epic movies, is the world's most famous body builder.

"I don't feel I'm any better than a fat guy, though," Peter points out. "I just like body building and I feel healthier for it."

"At first, when I used to go down to Willows Beach in a bathing suit, they'd be people who'd say 'Hey, look at that big guy!' And they'd all stare. But now they don't.

"Once in a while, maybe, a small boy will open his eyes wide and say:

"Hi Muscles!"

Slim Pickings in Summer Killed UVic Goal for Many

A lack of jobs in B.C. this summer was one of the main reasons 24 per cent of the students accepted by the University of Victoria in the spring failed to register in September.

Of the 2,900 applicants accepted by the university, 700 or 24.1 per cent did not follow through with their plans.

UVic administrative registrar G. J. Smiley wanted to know why so he mailed a questionnaire to 650 of them. (The other 50 were from outside North America).

A reply was received from 296 no-shows (46 per cent). It was found the main reason — 37.1 per cent of respondents — ended up going to another university or college.

In his report to the UVic Senate, Smiley concluded that "the province's economic situation this summer obviously contributed to a fair number of no-shows."

The lack of student housing was given by 14 students (4.7 per cent). Smiley concluded the housing situation "did not affect very many people this year."

Other reasons for not attending university included the lateness of admission — students who either applied late or who had to wait a long time to find out what transfer credit they were going to be awarded — taking a job, uncertain future plans, travelling, lack of transfer credit, health, lack of evening courses and the program wanted was not offered.

Of the students who replied, 94 said they would apply again next year.

"We may see a jump in first year enrolment next fall," Smiley suggested.

Smiley said he was surprised 36 students went instead to out-of-province universities.

"This . . . indicates that a large number of students are applying to at least two institutions and are not notifying the institution that they are not planning to attend.

"We may need to implement some type of control mechanism to alleviate this situation," his report says.

ASK THE TIMES

Q. What is the highest unclimbed mountain in the world and what is its name? M.C.

A. All the highest mountains have been climbed. The highest one is Mount Everest, which rises to a height of about 5½ miles above sea level. It is in the Himalaya range, on the frontiers of Tibet and Nepal, north of India. It was first climbed in 1953 when Sir Edmund Hillary of New Zealand and Tenzing Norgay, a Nepalese Sherpa tribesman, reached the top on May 29. The mountain is named for Sir George Everest, a British surveyor-general of India. Hillary and his campanion were part of a British expedition led by Sir John Hunt.

Abortions Legally Accepted, Euthanasia Next—Lawyer

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

A lawyer and mother of five said in Victoria Tuesday that where abortion law allows killing of the unborn, euthanasia, legalized killing of the elderly for example, can't be far behind.

Gwen Landolt of Toronto, president of the anti-abortion Alliance for Life, said most pro-abortionists now concede a foetus is a living being but argue not all life deserves the same protection.

Traditionally there has been a thread running through the country's law covering all ages which says no one can take a life without answering for it.

"We say, break the thread here (with easy abortion) and the precedent is set for all other vulnerable groups and it would be inconsistent not to see the practice spreading.

"If you can kill the unborn now, watch out for what's going to happen to the aged."

In an interview before speaking at St. Patrick's school Tuesday night, Mrs. Landolt said the sort of thing she's talking about has already appeared in California, Hawaii and Florida.

The California legislature recently passed a bill which removes the legal onus under certain conditions for doctors to resuscitate a patient.

In Hawaii, she said a family can now decide the extent of care which a relative should get under certain conditions, and the bill permitting that even refers to euthanasia, noting it as a practicality because the law now permits control over life and death through abortion.

And in Florida, a twice-defeated bill which equates the value of a life with usefulness is before the state government again. If approved it would see an end to medical treatment of mongoloid children who become sick.

"Everybody has value because they're here and a human being," she said. "Nobody stands in judgment on another's value of life enjoyment."

On the dimensions of the abortion issue, she said about 42,000 Canadians were killed during the six years of the Second World War. In 1974 alone, about 48,000 were killed by abortions.

Recent studies have shown about 70 per cent of abortions are being performed on single women who are deliberately using the operation as a method of birth control.

Most abortions are performed about the 10th week of pregnancy when there is perfectly natural depression, other studies have shown. The depression passes to be replaced with a sense of anticipation and fulfilment.

With more than 200,000 abortions in Canada since 1969, age groupings in the population are becoming unbalanced.

"In some Toronto parks, they're taking out the swings and putting in benches."

The trend raises the question of whether a smaller young generation will be willing or able to pay for the social benefits of a larger old population.

Mrs. Landolt said that Hungary, which along with other central European countries had liberal abortion laws for about 20 years, has reversed itself and now has strict controls.

Among problems which led to the change: more than half of hospital beds occupied by abortion cases. About 10 per cent of women bearing premature children after earlier having had abortions.

LANDOLT
. . . "watch out"

The Japanese, who have had easy abortion regulations, are becoming increasingly worried about infanticide, she said. They have had to close some bus depot lockers because women were abandoning their infants in them.

That view of life as cheap stems from ease of abortions, she said.

Mrs. Landolt said the Alliance wants a free vote in parliament on stricter abortion law and she thinks it will be a major issue in the next federal election, as it was in the American election just concluded.

She said the Alliance will concentrate its efforts on the 52 federal ridings across Canada where MPs were elected by a majority of less than 2,000 votes.

Stormy Seas Facing Gov't Over Housing

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government will be in for a rough ride if it attempts to dictate to municipalities what kind of housing requirements they have to meet.

This was the predominant reaction of municipal leaders to a report on housing, prepared by a joint provincial-municipal committee, which was released Tuesday.

The report recommends the housing minister be allowed to provide regional districts with estimates of the quantity and types of housing required to meet housing objectives.

The regional district would then allocate these requirements to the various municipalities, which would have to fulfil them.

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith said it will be terrible if a council had to ignore the wishes of residents and provide for another 10,000 people just because "Big Brother says so."

He said Oak Bay is aware that it will have to assume its share of inevitable growth but members of council feel the people in the area should have a say.

Housing Minister Hugh Curtis said Tuesday the report will form the basis for legislation at the next session but did not indicate what recommendations would be adopted.

The report, written by Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf, says one of the problems causing a shortage of housing is that municipal councils are more concerned with protecting the interests of the existing population who elect them than welcoming newcomers.

"I can't imagine any more serious case of tunnel vision than that," said Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Region Board.

'Bloody Insult,' Says Malcolm

He said the provincial government has been ignoring municipalities for years and now a committee attacks the municipalities for responding to those who elected the leaders.

Campbell said the government will be in great difficulty if it attempts to solve the housing problem by imposing housing quotas on the municipalities and regional districts.

Campbell labelled as a "backward step" a recommendation in the report that the principle of land-use contracts be scrapped.

He said he would have hoped the committee would have been more positive and come up with modifications to the perpetual features of the contracts and a method of accelerating their implementation.

Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm said it is "a bloody insult" for the committee members to assume the provincial government knows more about the housing problem than the municipalities.

He said housing is one of the most serious problems facing municipalities and the report is attempting to shift the blame to municipalities instead of dealing with high labor costs in B.C. and geographical factors which make planning difficult.

Joe Bourque, acting mayor of Saanich, said there is no question the process for getting housing developments approved at the provincial and municipal level is a bureaucratic maze.

With the co-operation of councils and the provincial government the process could be streamlined, he said.

Bourque said it is time councils direct their attention at providing houses at a reasonable price, in the $35,000 range and lower.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said the report's recommendations sound wonderful but aren't too practical unless the provincial government takes over the zoning of municipalities.

Young agreed with one of the report's recommendations, that zoning bylaws could be amended by a simple majority rather than by two-thirds of council members as is the case now.

Nematode Controls Knocked

Roy Messum, chief of the federal plant protection division of the department of agriculture, has left for Ottawa to discuss proposals for stricter regulations to control golden nematode in the Central Saanich quarantine area.

Mainland growers have complained that regulations for controlling golden nematode — a microscopic worm which severely cuts potato crop yields — need updating.

CORPORAL DEMOTED

A three-man disciplinary court martial Tuesday demoted Master Corporal Adolph Gustav Plewa to the rank of private after finding him guilty Monday of conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline.

The charge was in connection with Plewa's duties as a mess manager at the junior ranks mess at CFB Esquimalt between Oct. 20, 1973, and Dec. 31, 1974, and involved the theft of $1,400 from coin operated machies.

Plewa's lawyer, civilian Robert Johnston, of Victoria, introduced a number of written commendations from Plewa's superiors Monday and brought in five character witnesses in Tuesday's mitigation process.

Johnston told the court Monday that his client could take any form of punishment except dismissal from the service. He said Plewa, 46, has already signed over his pay allotment to begin repayment of the $1,400.

Plewa has been in the Canadian Armed Forces for 19 years.

Two others charged after investigation of the club's affairs earlier received prison terms and were dismissed from the service.

Robert Allan Hanner, a former president of the mess, was sentenced to four years in prison and Michael Joseph Sylvio Dalrymple, a former vice-president, received a one year sentence.

The court also stayed a charge of theft relating to the $1,400 and found Plewa innocent of conspiracy with a former bar manager to steal money from the coin-operated machines.

Silence the Foghorn—City

City council wants to close the Foghorn cabaret at the James Bay Inn, source of numerous complaints from residents on south Government Street.

At its informal caucus Tuesday, council decided to request the Liquor Administration Branch to lift the hotel's cabaret licence.

Aldermen have no objection to the hotel keeping its cocktail bar licence.

Mayor Mike Young said the problem stems from the fact there is no regulatory distinction between a cabaret and a cocktail lounge. When the hotel had only a cocktail bar it had no serious complaints, but little patronage.

The Foghorn is heavily patronized, "and I understand (according to residents) it is a pretty painful situation, particularly on a weekend," the mayor said.

"I like my rock and roll, but not at 1:30 in the morning," commented Ald. John Hayes.

He said the hotel should be made to restrict its operation, adding he thinks the site would be ideal for a neighborhood pub.

Referring to the early morning clamor, Young said, "It's almost as bad as bagpipes."

The inn owners will be notified of council's position and will have an opportunity to make a submission. A regular meeting of council Nov. 25 will deal with the matter.

Owner-manager Bill Wellburn said today he is "not very happy" about the license threat and blamed "one certain party" for the complaints which led to council's action.

"We take this very seriously," he said, promising a reply when council considers the formal resolution later this month.

"We've done various things — like special duty police hired at our expense to patrol near the front door from 11:30-1:30.

"But we get blamed for every goddam thing that happens in the neighborhood," Wellburn said.

The hotel has never been in difficulty with the Liquor Administration Branch and always co-operated with it, he added.

Meanwhile, police attention to the hotel will be maintained in a bid to curb rowdyism, vandalism, drunkenness and noise.

Deputy chief Les Mottershead reported earlier the only permanent relief for residents would be the lifting of the cabaret licence.

Mottershead said all liquor outlets have problems at closing time, but the James Bay Inn happens to be the only one in the city of Victoria located in a district that is primarily residential.

The Last Of The Billionaires

NEW YORK (AP) — Daniel Ludwig lives in a New York penthouse, running his shipping empire and overseeing the creation of a timber plantation in the Brazilian Amazon.

Though miles apart, the men share a bond: they are the last two living U.S. billionaires, says Fortune magazine.

Both MacArthur and Ludwig were born in 1897, dropped out of school after Grade 8 and "operate through an intricate web of private companies about which there is only limited public information," the financial magazine says in its November issue.

There the parallel ends, says Lewis Beman, Fortune associate editor who wrote the article.

MacArthur and Ludwig took different paths to become billionaires in a country that now boasts about 180,000 millionaires. They outlived the three other men who until recently shared their status as billionaires: Howard Hughes, J. Paul Getty and H. L. Hunt.

MacArthur, whose late brother was playwright Charles MacArthur, is the only stockholder of the Chicago-based Banker's Life and Casualty, the 44th largest insurance company in the U.S.

He bought the failing firm for $2,500 in 1939, and uses some of its $863 million in assets as a financial base for what Fortune terms "an enormous real estate investment" that includes holdings in New York City, Florida and Colorado.

Ludwig, although not a recluse, "apparently values his privacy almost as much as Howard Hughes did." Fortune says, "Ludwig hasn't spoken to a journalist since 1963."

Born in South Haven, Mich., the son of a real estate agent, Ludwig started out with a tugboat fleet. After pioneering a new system for financing tankers in 1936, his fleet grew to the current 50 ships totalling nearly seven million tons.

Irainian Envoy Shot in Paris

PARIS (UPI) — Iranian diplomat Homayoun Keykavoussi, 46, is in grave condition today after being gunned down outside his home by an assailant claiming to belong to a movement opposing the government of Shah Mohammed Reza Pamlevi.

Three hours after the attack a man telephoned a French news agency to say the shooting was the responsibility of the Reza Rezai Movement, which "executed the representative in France of the Iranian gestapo."

"We have administered just punishment to an individual whose role is to hunt down progressive Iranians in France," the caller said.

Rezai is the name of an Iranian Marxist who was killed in a street fight with police in Tehran June 16, 1973.

Keykavoussi, cultural attache at the embassy, was returning to his apartment Tuesday when a man seized him on the sidewalk. While the two grappled, the assailant shouted to an accomplice on a motorcycle, "shoot him, shoot him."

The diplomat fell to the sidewalk with two bullets in his stomach. The two assailants fled.

Keykavoussi, father of two sons and a daughter, was taken to Beaujon Hospital where he was listed in grave condition.

NEB Wants More Data On Pipe

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Energy Board plans a second visit to the north before it makes a decision on a northern natural gas pipeline.

The board, which spent three weeks in the Northwest Territories this fall, said Tuesday it will open hearings in Whitehorse, Yukon, on March 1 to hear evidence from four new groups admitted to the pipeline proceedings.

It said the Yukon Association of Municipalities, the Yukon Teachers Association, the Yukon Conservation Society and the Alcan Pipeline Co. have been granted status as interested parties.

Admission of the new interveners follows the filing of an application by Foothills Pipe Lines Yukon Ltd. to build Canadian sections of the Alcan line that would move Alaskan gas to U.S. customers.
